MADRID, Jan. 18,—(By Atlantic Cable.) Owing to the recall, in some quarters, "dismissal" is the word used, of Marshal Martinez de Campos from the captain-generalship of Cuba, the Duke of Tetuan, Minister for Foreign Affairs, has resigned. He will be succeeded by Senor El Duáyen.

RECALLED, NOT RESIGNED.

MADRID, Jan. 18.—Señor Canovas del Castillo, the President of the Council of Ministers, has received the following dispatch from Marshal Martinez de Campos: "I consider your telegram as an order, but I ought to stay. I have not given my resignation. I have no sense of failure. I am the first to congratulate the government upon its decision which perhaps will avert disagreements which do not affect me and might be hurtful to Spain."

Gen. Polaviaja, whose name has been mentioned as the probable successor of Gen. Campos, had a conference today with the President of the Council of Ministers. The general expressed himself as favoring the appointment of Gen. Weyler as captain-general, and in consequence the latter was sent for. Gen. Weyler will be definitely settled. Gen. Campos will return immediately to Spain.

MAN OF BLOOD AND IRON.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18. - The anwashington, Jan. 18. — The announcement of the appointment of Gen. Valeriano Weyler as captain-general of Cuba was received at Cuban head-quarters here as confirmatory of the view they had already expressed upon the news of Campos's retirement, that there has been a radical change in the policy of the Spanish cabinet and that henceforth there is to be a reign of blood and terror in Cuba. The change in the cabinet itself, in the retirement of the Duke of Tetuan and the succession of Schor El Buayaden as Minister of Foreign Affairs, is regarded as still further confirming this idea.

Gen. Weyler is a veteran soldier and has had his own experience in Cuban revolutions, for he followed the fortunes of the Spanish army in Cuba for years during the last revolution with the rank of colonel, and earned for himself a dreadful reputation as a man of blood and iron.

Moreover, the Cuban leaders here hint at action of cruelty to women and defenseless prisoners in his past in a fashion that augurs ill for the rebels who come within his power, and they predict that he will soon become involved in trouble with the United States government as the result of ill-treatment of American citizens who may be unfortunate enough to fall un-

A WILD SCENE.

Wilfred Laurier Tells Parliament (BY ASSOCIATED PRESS WIRE.)

OTTAWA (Ont.,) Jan. 18.—There was a wild scene in the House of Commons last night, when Mr. Kenney. Conservative of Halifax, N. S., accused Wilfred Laurier of being an annexationist ir. disguise.

Mr. Kenney read from a Boston paper what purported to be a report of a speech delivered by Mr. Laurier at a banquet in Boston. The report made by Mr. Laurier says that the time would come when Canada must be separated from England.

Mr. Laurier said he had not been correctly reported. Still he believed that Canada was attaining the rank of a nation. The Conservatives here broke into howls of dissent.

Mr. Landerkin, Liberal, shouted that Canada would soon be as great a country as England. The Liberals responded with cheers, and after some further debate quiet was restored.

It was noted that the French-Canadians remained silent. Mr. Langlier, one of their leaders, said: "We are well satisfied as things are now. But if our religion is not given the protection of the law, we will do something more than cheer and shout across the floor of Parliament." Mr. Langlier would not elucidate his remarks. It has inview the concentration of practically the entire United States navy in Turklish waters. The real reason why Rear Admiral Bunce's fleet has been held at Hampton Roads instead of sailing view the concentration of practically the entire United States navy in Turkish waters. The real reason why Rear Admiral Bunce's fleet has been held at Hampton Roads instead of sailing about Christmas time, as was the original intention, is because the authorities have decided the dispatch of the fleet to Turkish waters. The Asiatic squadron has also been considered and there are some officers at Washington who believe it is on the way to the Mediterranean, as the Asiatic station, usually so prolific in movements, has not been heard from in several weeks. The Newark, in South Atlantic waters, was also talked of.

"The United States would be able to make an imposing demonstration against the Turkish government, for the Turkish navy could not act effectively against it. It is antiquated and could easily be blown off the seas by the United States vessels. It is certain that some decisive stroke is being considered. In any event, there are good reasons for believing that the department will increase the European squadron by the New York and probably two other vessels. The transfer of Admiral Bunce's flag to the Maine is regarded in this connection as significant."

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS WIRE.) BERLIN, Jan. 18.-(By Atlantic Cable.) Throughout the German Empire today the twenty-fifth aniversary of the crowning at Versailles of King

William of Prussia, the grandfather of the present Emperor of Germany, and the consequent establishment of the German Empire, was celebrated in some form or other. The real event was the gathering in the white hall of the castle where the Emperor, surrounded by ministers of state, generals of the army, admirals navy, members of the diplothe throne. He declared his grandfather's vow to protect the rights of the Empire and to preserve peace had so far been fulfilled. He appealed to all sections to sink party differences and support him in protecting the sand prosperity of the Fatehr-

Reference in the Emperor's message to Prince Bismarck and to peace were heartily applauded. His Majesty, after he had concluded reading his message, seized the standard of the First Regiment of the Guards, and exclaimed: 'In view of these venerable colors, which have a glorious history of two hundred years, I renew the vow to defend the honor of the people, and the country at home and abroad. One empire, one people, one God."

Cheers were given for the Emperor. The parade of troops was a brilliant success.

The parade of troops was a briliant success.

The anniversary was celebrated by decrees published at the instance of the Secretaries of Culture and Worship in Pruesia, Saxony, Bavaria, Wurtemburg, Baden, Hesse, and the other German states, and all the schools of the Empire celebrated the day by applauding patriotic addresses delivered by the principals and teachers, and by recitation and singing. In Berlin, as well as in all other large cities, the municipalities and citizens had made preparations for the day. Stores were closed and business suspended from noon today. The principal event was the celebration under the Emperor's lead in Berlin.

the celebration under the Emperor's lead in Berlin.

The fête at the white hall of the Schloss, which was preceded by services in the churches, began at 10:45 o'clock, in the presence of the highest dignitaries of the empire, as well as the old delegates of the Reichstag, Bundesrath and Diet, and all the survivors of those who were members of these bodies in 1870-71. The jewel-studded insignia of the Emperor, crown scepter and globe, were borne by dignitaries standing on both sides of the throne. The festival at the palace was attended by the Empress and ex-Empress Frederick and the four eldest princes. The statues of Emperors William and Frederick were crowned with laurel.

When the Emperor entered the white hall, Baron yon Buolbernberg, president of the Reichstag, called for cheers for His Majesty. These were given heartily and His Majesty then read the message from the throne, as follows:

For this purpose we have summoned the plentpotentiaries of our mighty allies and the representatives of the powers and also those men, who at that great epoch, prominently contributed to the work of the union of

His Majesty then thanked Providence that the past twenty-four years had bestowed blessings upon the empire, and declared that his grandfather's vow to protect the rights of the empire, and preserve peace, had so far, with God's help, been fulfilled.

The Emperor also alluded to the work achieved by the German nation for the last twenty-five years under the direction of "its great Emperor," and the advice of its tried statesmen, and most particularly of its chancellor. Prince Bismarck.

ness and prosperity of our Father-land."

He added: "We shall then be able to oppose unitedly and solidly any attacks upon our independence, and devote ourselves undisturbed to the cultivation of our interests. But the German empire is far from being in danger from other states, and it is enjoying the respect of the nations, and will continue in the future as in the past, a strong pillar of peace. Count Yon Leichenfeld, Bavarian envoy to the Federal Council, then called for cheers for the Emperor. There was an enthusiastic response. Following the celebration at the White Hall, the Emperor reviewed the Guard Corps.
The various flars were taken under escort from the Schloss, the two eldest sons of Prince Albrecht of Prussia acting as color-officers for the first time.

His Majesty also received a delegation representing the students of all the German universities. The address to the Emperor was made by Cuno Pirala, a law student of the Berlin University. The only drawback was a slight fall of rain, but this did not dampen the enthusiasm of the masses to any great extent.

At the state banquet this evening 600 guests were in attendance. Emperor William in responding to the toast, "The Emperor," said the day had been the special anniversary of the party, because it had vividly recalled the memory of the great William I. Continuing, he said: "His Majesty (referring to William I.) succeeded in accomplishing all that our fathers hoped for during their youth, when they desired the unification of the great German Empire. We may entered they desired the unification of the great German Empire. We may en-joy the fruit the two departed Em-perors achieved for us, and it is our duty to maintain it now that the Ger-man Empire has become a great world empire.

In conclusion Emperor William said t was the duty of the Reichstag to support its Emperor, that all he had promised during the gathering in the promised during the gathering in the White Hall in the morning could be carried into effect if the members would only support him in confidence. He then drank to the prosperity of the empire, and expressed a wish that it might live long on the lines laid down by Emperor William I. The greatest enthussasm prevailed as all the guests of the evening joined the Emperor in drinking to the prosperity of the Fatherland.

ANTI-ENGLISH POLICY

Conlition Against Britain.

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS WIRE) BERLIN, Jan. 18.-(By Atlantic Cable. Associated Press Copyright, 1896.) The week has ended with everyone's thoughts directed to the imperial anniersary. The excitement caused by the Pransvaal incident is gradually abat-Transvaal incident is gradually abating, and the newspapers uniformly express the opinion that this difficulty will be adjusted by diplomacy, although there may be critical stages of the negotiations. The anti-English spirit, however, which was aroused by the invasion of the Boer republic, survives with full vigor, and it is significant that those in political circles who are in touch with the government have the idea that an open anti-English policy will henceforth be followed by Germany, especially in colonial affairs.

iisn policy will henceforth be followed by Germany, especially in coloridal affairs.

A conservative leader, discussing the recent complications, said that in a conversation which he had had with the Emperor, the latter said he would put himself at the head of a united European coalition against Great Britain, and that the threat of the latter to join the Zweibund, the so-called alliance between Russia and France, was laughable, since both of those countries stand closer to Germany today than Great Britain does to them.

Great Britain's interest in no part of the world, His Majesty is said to have continued, would tally with those of Russia and France. Besides, with the uncertain tenure of power on the part of the English cabinets and the shifting of party control in England, it would be foolish to expect a binding entente with that country. This fact has been repeatedly assigned by the representatives of Great Britain for her not joining the Dreibund, and it was further asserted the reason works both ways.

The indignation aroused in Germany by the statement published in the English newspangrs that the Emperor wrote a sort of excuse of his recent Transvaal attitude to his grandmother, Queen Victoria, is easily imagined. The German government newspapers have fully denied the statement during the last few days, although it is not denied that letters have passed between His Majesty and the Queen. But a court official who is in dally communication with the Emperor is authority for the statement that His Majesty expressed regret, not for having sent his memorable dispapatch to President Krueger, but for the manner in which it was received and commented upon in Great Britain.

The oleomargarine and Kanitz bills in the Reichstag both touched Ameri-

it was received and commented upon in Great Britain.

The oleomargarine and Kanitz bills, in the Reichstag both touched American interests. Count Podblelski's chief argument against the oleomargarine bill was that stearine and cotton-seed oil are imported largely from America to adulterate oleomargarine, thus rendering it unfit for food. He therefore urged that a heavy import duty be placed upon it. While discussing the Kanitz government grain monopoly bill several of the agrarian speakers dwelt upon the impossibility of competing with the products of American cheap land and demanded government pro-

her spars and sails reduced. In addition several tons are being taken off her lead keel, with the view of lightening her generally. A. D. Olark's cutter Santanita, is also having her spars cut down, her sail area reduced and the amount of lead for her keel diminished. Some of the statements in the press regarding Lord Sholto Douglas, son of Marquis of Queensberry, who married an actress of California, have produced a remarkable letter from the Marquis. He says he allowed Lord Sholto £300 (31600) as he did- all his brothers. He said: "My sons go to distant lands and choose to marry musichall singers without my consent and they must take the consequences."

The Marquis then discussed the alleged reason for what he looks upon as American hatred of the English. He says he served on a British warship during the civil war and that the feelings of his country were entirely for smashing the Union. Our men used to sing nightly, lying off. New Orleans, surrounded by half a dozen Federal ships, The Bonnie Blue Flag. On Wednesday last during a check which occurred soon after the hunt was started, Lord Lonsdale got into a dispute with a former master of the hounds who is still a prominent member of the hunt. Athough the day's sport had just commenced, Lord Lonsdale immediately stopped the hunt and sent the hounds to their kennels, thus disappointing a large field.

Recent statements have appeared in the London papers claiming the Foreign Office was preparing elaborate maps and a lengthy report on all phases of the Venezuelan question. In regard to this statement a high official at the Foreign Office stated to a reporter of the Associated Press:

"We are not preparing any new or spec her spars and sails reduced. In addition several tons are being taken off government. As stated some time ago to the Associated Press, they do not cover the entire ground as they seem to be only extracts taken at random here and there. While they are undoubtedly authentic, so far as they go, they do not have the authenticity of being accepted by the British government as determinate in the matter."

Ambassador Bayard was asked if he had any official information that Lord Salisbury was preparing a special report of the question. The Ambassador said: "I have nothing official on the matter, but have, of course, heard it intimated that such was the fact. I am heartily glad to know it is so, as it will undoubtedly tend to expedite matter published by the Chronicle is taken from that which was published in Paris some years ago, nor do I know the exact source of these documents. They may have been the work of Guzman Blanco, who once represented the Venezuelan government in Paris. He was an able man, one who had acquired a large fortune and represented his government in various diplomatic matters."

The spirit of patriotism which was aroused by the German Emperor's telegram to Krueger continue.

his government in various diplomatic matters."

The spirit of patriotism which was aroused by the German Emperor's telegram to Krueger continues to manifest itself in many ways, and at the theaters any allusion to Germany is received with groans by the gallery and pit, while the national anthem, "God Save the Queen," which concludes every performance at most of the theaters, is received with cheers and a universal raising of hats by the dispersing audicine, in decided contrast to the carelessness with which it was generally received a few weeks ago.

While this hostility to Germany is everywhere shown, quite the reverse has been the case in regard to the United States, evn at the height of the difficulty with Great Britain over the Venezuelan matter. A notable instance of this is seen nightly at the Drury Lane pantomime. The American flag with the allusions to the United States is brought in on several occasions. In fact, the flag is rather flaunted before the Britishers by a typical "Uncle Sam" in one scene. But it has never provoked any hostile demonstration. Indeed, as the clown locks arms with "Uncle Sam" and says: "Well, we are not going to quarrel with our cousins about Venezuela," or some remark of that kind, the most cordial approval is given to the sentiment by the audience.

The principal attractions at the theaters are the plays now running at the Lyric, the St. James and the Shaftesbury. At the former Wilson Barrett's four-act play, "The Sign of the Cross," continues to draw big houses. All swelldom praises Mrs. Beerhohm Tree's acting in "A Woman's Reason," at the Shaftesbury, while George Alexander at the St. James in "A Prisoner of Zenda" secured the greatest success since he produced "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray."

pany season of English opera will open at Daly's theater next Monday. Among the novetiles to be produced are "The Heart of Midjothian," liberetto by Joseph Bennett, and the score by McCunn, and the Parisian success, "La Vivandiere," written and composed by the late Benjamin Goddard.

It is generally conceded that "Michael and His Lost Angel," which, after the postponement, was finally produced on Wednesday last at the Lyceum, is not quite up to the average of Henry Arthur Jones's former productions, either in literary merit or artistic finish. It is again announced that Dorothez Balrd, the "Trilby" of the Haymarket, is engaged to be married to H. B. Irving, eldest son of Sir Henry Irving.

SOME POREIGN RELATIONS.

nce His Elopement with Siste Mabel Franklin He Finds it is not Good for Man to Live Alone.

(BY TELEGRAPH TO THE TIMES.) NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—(Special Dis-patch.) There is going to be a change of some kind before long in the Shake It is all due to the recent elopement of Elder Daniel Offord and Sister Mabel Franklin. These two people, who were considerably over 21, made up their minds that the Shaker settlement was no place for married couples, so they quietly took their departure and one another for better or worse. To say that the good brothers and sisters were surprised is to put it mildly. Nothing so romantic as an elopement had ever occurred in the community to cast doubt on the theory and practice of cellbacy. Besides, no one suspected Elder Offord of harboring tender sentiments. He was a sedate, middle-aged Shaker who should have known better. Just now the chief topic of conversation, not only at Lebanon but in other Shaker settlements, is Elder Offord's new scheme of a colony in California, its prospects and probable success. He proposes to establish a 'social and industrial community on a coöperative basis. He does not believe, of course, in celibacy, and marriage will be allowed in the new colony. In most other respects the enterprise will be modeled along Shaker lines.

When Elder Offord opposed the state of single blessedness he attacked one of the cardinal tenets of the Shaker sith Pupplers of Shakerism insisted upon lifelong celibacy and pointed to the example of the Savior, who did not marry. Elder Offord claims, as others have done, that no community observing celibacy can last. Such a community will grow less and less and If remains to be seen how many peo-ple Elder Offord can persuade to fol-low him in his reforms. Some who pro-fess to know predict he will carry north

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 18.—The Palo Alto stakes for three-year-olds and upwards and the two-year-old race were the features at Ingleside today Pat Dunne's colt Pepper was thought to have the stake at his mercy, and was a heavily-played favorite at even money. Gallant and Cadmus, the Spreckels pair, were coupled at 8 to 1; Cabrillo and Thornhill at 6, and Olive Highland and Wheel of Fortune at 10, with Roma the only outsider, at 60 to 1. Gallant jumped into the lead and immediately opened a gap of half a dozen lengths, which position he maintained until the end, winning as he pleased, with the others beaten away off. Cadmus came fast at the end, and it looked as if the Spreckels pair ran one, two, but Pepper was awarded the place.

Walter Hobart's Coupon is unquestionably the fastest two-year-old turned out this year, as for the second time he galloped away from his field in hollow fashion. Coupon has started but twice and has defeated all the two-year-olds at the track.

Green B. Morris turned loose his American Derby winner Strathmeath in the last race, the old horse galloping in with the julcy odds of 5 to 1 against him. Braw Scot finished second in this race, but was disqualified for a foul. All Over and Coupon were the only winning favorites, the remaining events falling to the lot of two outsiders and one third choice.

Floods Apprehended Unless the Storm Ends.

Oakland Man Dying From Cigarett Smoking-Railroad Contest at Phoesix-An Unknown Man's Remains Are Found.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 18.—The Pacific Coast branch of the United States Weather Bureau predicts that the continued rains of the past five days will cause floods throughout the State. The rivers are already overflowing their banks, and the tule lands are filling. Farming operations on the lowlands must finevitably be interfered with. The entire State, except the extreme sonthwestern portion, has had all the rain desired. At Red Bluffs, Colusa and other portions along the Sacramento, the fiver is brimming over. The danger point has aiready been reached, and both the American and Feather rivers are also too high.

What makes the situation the more serious is the certainty that the rise will continue for forty-eight hours longer, even without more, rain. The downpour still continues with little probability of clearing within twenty-four hours. (BY ASSOCIATED PRESS WIRE.)

CAUSING INCONVENIENCE. NAPA, Jan. 18.—The severity of the rainstorm has caused some inconven-lence here, and the river still overflows ience here, and the river still overflows its banks in some places which are especially low. The rainfall here during last night was 1.75 inches, while in the upper end of the valley at St. Helena and Calistoga nearly twice that much water fell in the same time. This caused the water to flow over the track at Krugs station, above St. Helena, and caused a delay of two hours in the coming of the south-bound train this morning. All trains are running on time tonight.

It is reported that twelve inches of

It is reported that twelve inches of rain have fallen in St. Helena during this week. The river is falling now and as very little rain fell today no fear is now felt of any damage.

enter today is bright and the sun is shinding, the storm appears to have ended. There was a very heavy rainstorm here last night, and in the mountains it became furiors. The wind blew a perfect gale, and there was a terrific fall of rain. Crystal Lake, near Cisco, again overflowed its banks and washed out 100 feet of culvert. Forty feet of snowshed was prostrated by the wind, in addition to seventy-five feet which went down yesterday morning. A temporary trestle has been constructed and three westbound passenger trains are now moving toward this city from Truckee. The branch railroad between Marysville and Oroville is under water for a distance of three miles to a depth of from five inches to five feet. The Oregon express train is now compelled to run by way of Willows, the morthbound train reaching the main line again at Tehama.

GOING UP.

GOING UP.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 18.—The United States Weather Bureau has issued the following billetin regarding the rise of rivers: The Sacramento River at Redding is 13.4 feet and rising; at Red Bluff, the water is now 22 feet and rising. This is the danger point. At Colusa it is 25.1 feet, or the danger point, and this stage will be maintained for twenty-four hours. The river is probably overflowing at points above Colusa. At Marysville it is 17.2 feet and rising slowly; the American River at Folsom has risen ten feet in twenty-four hours and this stage will be maintained twenty-four hours longer; at Sacramento the river is 19.9 feet. Il will continue to rise slowly for the next thirty-six or forty-eight hours. Should heavy rain not continue there will probably only be sufficient rainfall to flood the lowlands and tule basins of the Sacramento Valley.

WINE AND WATER. GOING UP.

WINE AND WATER, CLOVERDALE, Jan. 18.—The rainstorm has been terrific for the past six days; with a precipitation of 13.10 inches, Much damage is reported from high water. The valley land of Turner ranch was severely cut by the flood and many roads are impassable. The Parker Vineyard Company has suffered to heaviest loss. The stone winery the heaviest loss. The stone winery was constructed along a side-hill which became so saturated that it slid, collapsing the building. The wine had been moved to an adjoining building preparatory to shipment and was not caught in the avalanche.

MISCHIEF AROUND REDDING. REDDING, Jan. 18.—The storm has abated and a strong wind has been blowing from the west. The river is very high, the waters submerging the Electric Light and Water Company's works with the result of na light or works with the result of na light or water.

The Iron Mountain Railroad is in bad condition. The rain thoroughly soaked the earth and there are numerous slides all along the line, with culverts stopped up and the road-bed washed away. The company was expecting to start up a furnace at Keswick with a charge of ore in a few days, but the storm will set them back a month at least. Overland trains have been late on account of high water and slides. The rainfall is almost up to the figure of last season at the same date.

PASEDNGERS SENT BACK. PASSENGERS SENT BACK.

SANTA CRUZ, Jan. 18.—Owing to the SANTA CRUZ, Jan. 18.—Owing to the big slide near Felton, the narrow-gauge train for San Francisco was unable to get through this morning, and the passengers returned to this city. The passengers on the down train from San Francisco will have to be transferred. It is expected that the track will be cleared in twelve hours. It was raining hard this morning.

ANOTHER SLIDE. ANOTHER SLIDE.

ROSEBURG, Jan. 18.—Anoher large slide occurred on the Southern Pacific at the south end of tunnel No. 2, three miles south of West Fork. A large force of men has been put at work and it is expected to have the track cleared by Monday. Passengers are being transferred in the meantime.

A BENEFICIAL STORM.

STOCKTON, Jan. 18.—There is no high water hereabouts and the steamers had only eight inches more of water to ride out on this evening. The streams do not show much of a rise and will not unless more rain falls in the mountains. The rainfall here up to the close of the storm this afternoon was 2.42 inches for the month, making 5.57 inches for the season, against 14.80 inches last year.

The rainfall last night and today measured .53 of an inch. It is the most beneficial storm seen here in many years and has made farming prospects almost sure. The storm seems to be at an end. A BENEFICIAL STORM.

PHOENIX, (Ariz.,) Jan. 18.—The triangular legal contest between the Atlantic and Pacific, the holders of the first mortgage bonds of $16,000,000, and the second mortgage bondholders representing $5,000,000, was argued today before Judge J. J. Hawkins in the United States District Court here. The road is in the 'hands of a receiver.

The first-mortgage bondholders want to sue for possession in their own name; the second-mortgage bondholders want the receiver continued in the original proceedings and their motion to consolidate the first-mortgage bondholders' action with their own, was granted, the judge holding that all equities and priorities could be better taken care of in the original proceedings and large complication avoided, there being something near $1,000,000 in receivers' certificates and other Habilities of the court now outstanding in the proceedings started by the Mercantile Trust Company of New York in January, 1894. SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 18.—The State convention to protest against the passage of the Funding Bill, called by Mayor Sutro, was not largely attended at its first meeting this afternoon. The absence of many expected delegates was ascribed to the shortness of the call for the convention, and its was at first proposed to postpone the meeting for a week. An organization was effected, however, with Mayor Sutro as chairman, and a committee of ten was appointed to draft resolutions.

Resolutions were adopted denouncing Huntington and the Southern Pacific, and demanding that the Funding Bill be defeated in Congress. Speeches were made by Mayor Sutro, Taylor Rogers, Henry E. Highton and others. Denis Kearney, the sand-lotter, attempted to speak, but he was refused a hearing. He tried to force himself upon the meeting, but an able-bodied policeman kept him quiet. The convention, after adopting the resolutions, adjourned subject to the call of the chair.

The convention adopted strong resolutions protesting against the Pacific Railroad's funding bills, and directing that a copy of the message be sent to Congress. Five delegates were elected to go to Washington and work against the passage of the Funding Bill by Congress. BY ASSOCIATED PRESS WIRE.)

THEY FOUND A PLACE.

THE POPULISTS' CONVENTION IS NOW LOCATED.

The National Committee Decides or St. Louis as the Place and July 22 as the Date-Anti-Territorial Admission Yarn.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS WIRE.)

ST. LOUIS (Mo..) Jan. 18.—After a session of two days the Pouplist National Committee adjourned sine die this afternoon without having selected a place to hold the next national convention which will be held on July 22, next, unless the date is changed by the Executive Committee. This committee will probably select the place of meeting next Monday, but whatever decision it reaches may be changed when the report is received from the special committee appointed to visit Washington, D. C. January 22 and confer with the Bimetallic League as to the advisability of holding its national convention at the same time and place as the Populists. Snyder of Kansas presented the following resolution which, after considerable discussion, was adopted almost unanimously, there being only three dissenting votes:

"Resolved, that in line with the action of our friends at State meetings lately held by the People's party in North Dakota, Illinois and Indiana, the members of the National Committee in executive session at St. Louis on January 17, desire to express their entire confidence in the wisdom, judgment and integrity of our chairman, Hon. H. E. Taubeneck; our secretary, J. H. Turner; our treasurer, Hon. H. McRankin, and each of the other members of the Executive Committee in their conduct, with the People's party's (BY ASSOCIATED PRESS WIRE.)

urer, Hon. H. McRankin, and each of the other members of the Executive Committee in their conduct with the People's party's business and its representatives, and urge and advise Populists throughout the nation to immediately line up'to the support of the Executive Committee with liberal contributions to sustain its work in the coming campaign." At 1 o'clock a recess was taken.

When the committee reassembled at 2:30 o'clock the question of referring the matter of selecting a place of meeting to the Executive Committee with instructions to act within ten days came up and aroused much discussion. It was finally decided in the affirmative and the contesting cities were requested to present new propositions to the Executive Committee next Monday, when the Executive Committee than adjourned sine die.

LATER:—A meeting of the Executive Committee was unexpectedly called tonight to the discussions them the committee decided to Juny 22.

THE POPULIST OFFERS.

THE POPULIST OFFERS. THE POPULIST OFFERS.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 18.—The hearing of representatives of different cities who are working to secure the National Populist Convention that will meet on July 22 next, was resumed at 10 o'clock this morning, when the National Committee reassembled.

at 10 o'clock this morning, when the National Committee reassembled.

D. M. Fulweiler of Arkansas spoke for Chicago. He was followed by Dr. H. Kylor, Eugene Smith and F. J. Schuette, representing the business men of Chicago. Schuette intimated that at least $20,000 could be raised for the Populist cause if they were given sufficient time to collect it. E. S. Heisler and Joseph H. Schneider, who spoke for Kansas City, Kan., said they were propared to erect a tent 150x300 feet, sufficiently large to seat 20,000 people, within a block of the Courthouse. Harry Tracey, D. E. Leidy and Mayor Holland spoke in behalf of Dallas. When they finished the committee went into executive session.

"Disappointment awaits the people of New Mexico and Arizona. They have been knock ing for admission into the Union for many years, but the decree has gone forth that their prayers will be left unanswered for another two years. They can thank Speaker Reed and his little combine for the dose of disappointment brewd for their consumption. The explanation offered is that it is deemed of the highest importance to check any further growth of the silver strength in the Senate, and the best way to do that is to preyent any increase of representation from the mountain region. SUBSCRIBERS TO THE LOAN.

BROOKLYN (N. Y.,) Jan. 18.—Ex-Congressman W. J. Goombs, president of the Manufacturers' Trust Company of this city, has sent the following letter to Secretary of the Treasury Carlisle:

"We are subscribers to the popular loan and have accumulated gold to be used in payment for the same. We are willing to deposit this gold in the treasury for the use of the government and receive a receipt therefor specifying that, in case none of the bonds be awarded to us, the gold shall be returned out of the proceeds of that which is received from successful bidders. We think that many of the banking institutions will be willing to do the same thing, and in that way, without loss to themselves, assist the treasury in the interim in maintaing its gold reserve."

DISEASES OF THE SKIN. The Specialist on Skin Disease had charge of the skin wards of the Montreal General Hospital for five years, and later practiced this specialty for fifteen years, part of which time he was a Professor of Skin Diseases in a 'arge eastern medical college. No man in California is as well posted in Diseases of the Skin as is this Specialist. He has devoted his best life to these troubles, and surely he is better qualified to treat such diseases than the medical man who tries to practice all the specialities in the field of medicine. Blood Impurities, Syphilis, Scrofula, Eczema, Cancer, Tumors and all Skin Rashes. Remember, consukation is always free and confidential.

FOR SALE—THE RAIN MADE IT A LITtle muddy, "but the next day, oh, how different." Where is the man who says "dry season" now? You don't care about going one to look at lots in the Nob Hill tract; you would soll your shoes and some of the mud would stick to you, too. But wait until it clears off, the sun comes out, and drys up thing, and then take a look from "Ocean View" ave.; in a week the country will begin to get green, the flowers to bloom, grass to grow and the Westlake Park country will be "strictly in it." You know I have some choice lots, 50x150, with all street improvements pald for; grading, graveling, cement curb and sidewalk; cobblestone gutters; lots leveled to a uniform grade of 4 feet above, sidewalks; price $1000 each,

FOR SALE-

Howland Olive Orchards.

As an investment, as a future paying business, we believe the Howland Olive Orchard and Olive Plant is worthy of a thorough investigation by anyone wishing a permanent and paying business. We believe that the olive busiess is but in its infancy and stands today where the orange industry did is or 20 years ago. Look over the statistics and see the amount of olive oil and olive pickles shipped to this country and then see the small amount this country and then see the small amount this country and then see the small amount this what the future will be for this industry. And the quantity of oil used today is but a drop in the bucket to the amount that will be used when thoroughly introduced in our country, and any person or company that goes into the business now and gets their trade established will get the full benefit in the future. The Howland olive orchards and plant consists of 150 acres and olive mill which cost-over $5000. One orchard is because 10 miles southeast of Pomona; 115 acres sold to olive trees, mostly 4 and 5 years old, of the best varieties for oil and pickles, just commencing to bear; small house, barm, etc., and a 35-acre orchard just horth of Pomona, near. D. A. MEEKINS, 315 S. Broadway.

FOR SALE—IF YOU THINK OF GETTING an orange-grove aiready in bearing and in choice orange section, drop into my office and ask me about one I have at Monrovia. It will cost you only three or four hours and no money to see it; it's hanging loaden and ask me about oranges as' you ever looked at. If you've been looking at groves they asked you from $15,000 to $20,000 for, come look at this and compare it with them; I'll sell it for $12,000, and if you get it you'd ask $15,000 for it next day; remember that, if you get it. It's 18 acres, right in the town of Monrovia, and $1000 per acre would be considered a fair price for it. All I ask is that you come round and investigate, and spare the three or four hours, and I'll show you something to be remembered, whether you buy it or not.

POMONA. That Pomona Excursion!

And the Next Day it Rained. Yes, we had an excursion to Pomona on the listh; we prepared for 390, and had 1800; in other words we prepared for high tide, but had a tidal wave. Under the circumstances we did the best we could, but if there were any tourists or homeseekers that were out here that day who did not get a ride or see our valley from the top of the hill; if they will notify us a day in advance, we will personally show them the valley without any expense. We mean it. Come along.

DERSONAL-Business.

-RED RICE'S .-It is generally conceded that this house contains one of the largest and most varied mostly bought at less than regular-so much so, that we can retail for about what others pay for the goods. This makes it so that beyond a doubt you save about one-quarter by trading with us; so that when others advertise to sell for cost or less than cost, it is but rarely that they get down to our every-day prices. But now, owing to an extra need of money, if there is any person or persons about fitting up a hotel or lodging-house, we purpose so cutting prices as will bring to us the cash. Hundreds of bedroom sets, thousands of chairs, scores of carpets, hundreds of comforts, lots of bedding-in fact, everything need in house keeping, besides and in addition to the world of ordinary goods. We have much that is rich and rare, such as costly wardrobes, sideboards, chiffoniers, portieres, folding beds, etc. Then again we have many odd things not usually kept at such church or hall organ for $25, worth $100; a good pipe organ that cost $225 for $30; nice are nice, half price; solld oak and gilded easels. Oh, yes, there are lots of nice things going cheap upstairs and down at the great stores of the RED RICE FURNITURE CO.,

351 and 353 N. Main st., Los Angeles. It PERSONAL-UNDERSIGNED DESIRES EM-PERSONAL—UNDERSIGNED DESIRES EMployment, has experience as carpenter, inspector and other kinds of work; does not belong to any secret organizations or striking labor unions, whose main object tends to destroy property, lives and liberty of the individual, and will resort to all sorts of cunning schemes unlawfully to obtain their ends; hence I do not expect a pull from these channels; will attend strictly to work paid for, to the best satisfaction of employer; has courage, discipline and capacity of stand by these principles; any one needing such man would confer a favor by addressing A. BERGMAN, Station C, City.

NO. III.

If you are a woman and are afflicted with some of the painful and complicated disorders peculiar to your sex you are doubtless often overtaken by a feeling of despair. This is all wrong and you should reinforce your courage body, upon her constant efforts to re-pair and heal instead of severing, and upon the wonderful vitality of the Caucasian race. If nature has her way she accomplishes wonders and often works a cure after man has pro-

It is a mistake for women to believe that the disorders peculiar to their sex are less easily cured than other diseases. The contrary statement is true, provided the treatment is of the proper kind. Women, with their greater endurance of pain, their higher nervous tension and their keener susceptibilities, are more quickly and more easily influenced by medicines than men are. The term "Diseases of Women" has become a synonym for inpensive illnesses, only because the methods of cure in vogue make them such; not because nature intended to inflict upon the so-called weaker sex special and almost unendurable physi-cal ills. What has been lacking has een the MATERIA MEDICA, the proper drugs, or medicinal agents. These have been found in the Chinese erbal specifics. Diseases of women is known in America are unknown in China, largely because these remedies are constantly used among the wealthier classes of the Flowery King-dom. They must, however, be used with intelligence, skill and adaptation o particular cases. We are not adver

CURE-ALL, OR UNIVERSAL NOS-TRUM.
We draw, in the treatment of these diseases, from more than three thousand remedies and suggest in each case the combination which is adapted to a cure. We do not use concentrated irugs, which are necessarily violent in their action. But we employ remedies which act with a gentle but constantly cumulative effect, the final result be ing a greater quickening of the vital powers and a more complete nourishing of all the organs than is possible in any other way. Besides this we which, if properly followed, will prevent a return of the disease. There is no secrecy about our methods. Our patients see exactly what they are using, and are encouraged to prepare the remedies at home and for themselves. We have nothing to conceal, but, on the contrary, we encourage every form of unprejudiced investiga-tion, knowing that the more fully our methods are understood the greater will be our rewards. This is an opportunity never before offered the women of America to acquire, free of harge, the most useful information health, and for making a practical test

ALL THAT THE MOST SKILLFUL without pain, risk or violent shock to the system. We are aware that we should not offer so much were we not series of successes. It is natural for of medicines, and we therefore empha size the fact that we insist upon the most active and persistent co-operalife-in an avoidence of the causes in the adoption of a more hygienic and rational mode of living.

It may seem strange to many that any good thing in this respect could come out of China. But every one knows, who has studied the question, that the Chinese have more correct noons upon matters of health than Americans. Their lives are free from the worries and excesses of ours, and they study-although their religion regard life less highly than we regard t-to preserve life as long as possible, and, after reaching the meridian to pass down the shady side of it as easily as possible. We have adopted some of their maxims, which we teach our patients, in addition to instructions as regards the use of the remedies. These facts are in themselves an education of great value to any voman who has lost her health. the will to adopt simpler methods of living, assisted in the effort by our remedies, which make the transition easy, pleasant and of enduring benefit Remember that we treat every form of disease peculiar to women-from simple derangements of the menstrual function to cancers of the breast or womb, inflammation of the ovaries womb, inflammation of the ovaries, atrophy or wasting away of the womb and similar diseases for which the surgeon's knife is so often needlessly brought into play. The length of time necessary to a cure can only be determined by an examination into the particulars of each case. But we will give a candid opinion upon this point and upon the curability of any case. upon the curability of any case.

WE WILL DO ALL THAT WE PROM-Examination, diagnosis and opinion are absolutely free in all cases.

We have nothing to offer the women form or ether, no formidable array of surgical instruments, no cases of complicated apparatus, no operating tables or similar equipments, nothing what-ever to impress the mind by inspiring wonder, awe or dread. We have only medicines, and those of the very simplest sort. Doubtless our methods are not considered strictly scientific those who admire the cold beauty of the exact and inexorable technique which removes abnormal growths by the knife. But if they are slower, they are also surer. We offer pure ele-ments in vegetable form to assist nature in growing and in throwing off abnormal growths and reducing inflammations. In this we reach se cases in which THE SURGEON'S KNIFE OFTEN MEANS DEATH.

MEANS DEATH.

There is plenty of evidence to prove that in a great many cases simplicity and perseverance are sufficient. Do not permit yourself to consider your case hopeless until you know for sure. Do not be deceived by surface symptoms or by the habit which you have acquired of referring unfavorable indications to your physician who thereupon decides that he cannot assist you. Diagnosis by the pulse GOES DEEPER THAN SYMPTOMS

GOES DEEPER THAN SYMPTOMS. It deermines the degre of vigor which the blood possesses and upon which everything depends in these cases. It tells whether the blood is thin and tells whether the blood is thin and watery or sufficiently charged with the tells whether the blood is thin and watery or sufficiently charged with the vital juices that sustain life; whether the stomach, kidneys, liver, lungs and heart are up to their normal degree of vigor or whether they are sufficiently sluggish in their action to produce pains. We care nothing for the pains, but seek to remove the causes by our herb teas, which are nothing more or less than special foods for particular organs. In China they are spoken of as ELEMENTS OF NUTRITION, but to meet the phraseology of Americans we have to call them medicines. If you need upbuilding, make a test of them.

The Flowery Kingdom Herb Remedy Company, T. Foo Yuen, Medical Director. B. C. Platt, Assistant and Business Manager. P.O. Box No. 1717, Station F., Los Angeles, Cal. P. S. We present herewith a few opinions of women, most of whom are residents of this city, who have received benefit from our herbal specifics. These represent only a few of the many cases that have used these remedies, but, as we have not obtained permission from others, we do not give their names. The ladies who testify to the facts herein stated, do so because they are desirous that others should have the benefit of their knowledge in having tested these remedies, and because they believe that others may achieve the same results if they follow the same course. The letters explain themselves, and we offer them without introduction.

LOS ANGELES (Cal.,) Jan. 15, 1896.
B. C. Platt, City—Dear Sir: I cheerfully respond to your request for my opinion of Or. Foo and the merits of his herbal remedies. I am one of those who have made a thorough test of these remedies, and can speak with confidence. They have been used in our family for the past two years, and we have found them of immeasurable benefit. My husband was the first to test them, being cured of hemorrhages which had baffled the skill of the best physicians of the east for fourteen years.

enumerate in this letter. The treatment did away with all these, helped me to pass the critical period mentioned and restored me to fair health, which improves as time advances.

We have been enthusiastic over these herbal remedies, and the methods employed in diagnosis and in administering the remedies. We now find that we are not the only enthusiasts, but that the use of these herbal severy day gaining ground, and that others are beginning to appreciate their great value, in short, the prejudice which every one feels against them on the start wears away with experience. In predict octinued popularity for them. Six predict octinued popularity for them. Six WILLIAM MAYLURY.

LOS ANGELES (Cal.) Jan. 14, 1896.

Mr. *B. C. Platt, City-Poer Sir: I take pleasure in offering for the benefit of others a statement of the results of the treatment which I have received from Dr. Foo. For the past seven or eight years I had suffered most intensely and almost constantly from the effects of disorders which had their origin in the ovaries. These were very greatly enlarged and inflamed, producing pains that frequently seemed unbearable and are simply indescribable. These conditions began about seven or eight years ago, when I was 35 years of age, and have continued, with only very brief and infrequent intervals of comparative freedom from pain, since that time. I was always troubed.

All the medical assistance that time. I was always troubed on the circulation and alonda a very painful end disagreeable shortness of breath as a result of the slightest exertion.

All the medical assistance that I could secure did me no good, and my difficulties wore on me-until my weight was reduced from 140 to 110 pounds, and I kept getting weaker and weaker. Your system of medication was brought to my attention, and I took one curse of your remedies, which in here the months, except very slight indications resulting from my taking cold. My course of treatment lasted four months, and I then discontinued it, and am at present resting for a few m

LOS ANGELEE (Cal.) Jag. 18, 1896.

B. C. Platt. Esq., city—Dear Sir: Circumstances have brought Dr. Foo's system of medicine very prominently before my attention for the past three years, both in my own case, and in the cases of others. This fact, together with my long experience with other physicians, and with the great change in my own condition before and after taking Dr. Foo's remedies, qualifies me, I think to speak with some authority upon this subject, and with a feeling of sympathy for those who are efflicted in a similar way. I feel that I ought to advise these to begin treatment with these remedies, and not to permit themselves to be swaved by any feelism of sentiment or prejudice or to submit themselves to the very questionshie and inefficient methods so often employed in the treatment of discontinent or prejudice or to submit themselves to the very questionshie and inefficient methods so often employed in the treatment of discontinent or prejudice or to submit themselves to the very questionshie and inefficient methods and seen a great many cases treated by Dr. Foo's herb remedies, and have witnessed might be a seen a great many cases treated by Dr. Foo's methods and others is so great as to be almost beyond belief. Yet the results are there. The testimonial of my husband, 2s published by you, does not tell half the truth. He now welks 185 pounds and is able to work harder than at any time since he was first taken sick, eleven years so, and after nine years of unprofitable medication with American doctors and taking an unto'd amount of drugs. We feel that, as a family, we were fortunate in becoming acquainted with a better system of common sense and of experience is of any value will readily see the merits of this system, upon investigation. In the treatment of diseases of women it is the most refined as well as the most successful this, I have ever heard of. The benefits which women may derive from the use of

of Robbers Rifled A. Richard-son's Safe—They Even Took the Copper Cents.

A daring robbery was perpetrated last evening at Prospect Park, west of the city limits, and the robbers are as yet free. About 8 pm. three men entered the general merchandise store and postoffice at Prospect Park and asked A. Richardson, the manager, for a pound of crackers. While Mr. Richardson was scooping up the crackers from the barrel he suddenly became aware that a gun was pointed directly in his face, and the man who held the weapon mildly asked the storekeeper to deliver up all the cash he had on hand.

Richardson was made to open the safe and deliver to the other men $40 in cash, some of which was pestoffice money, and the robbers, by seeking further found $4 more in copper cents. When the booty was secured all three of the men departed and were soon all three of the men departed and were soon out of sight.

None of the men wore masks or other disguise, and would be easily identified by the victim of their trick. One of the robbers, who wore a light check suit, soft felt hat, and without an overcoat, is supposed to be the same who took a short ride early in the evening with James Black of Cahuenga, an employé of Dr. Davidson, who gave the man a lift in the mud.

One of the other men, and the spokesman of the gang, who may have been between 22 and 28 years of age, was in the store about two weeks ago. Though all the men are strangers to Mr. Richardson, they evidently well knew him and that particular section, for their work was done successfully, and their escape made expeditiously.

Sheriff Burr and Under Sheriff Clement were notified by telephone, and at about the same hour The Times received information of the robbery. The officers, in a buggy, and a Times reporter on horseback, departed for the scene, arriving at about the same time. The pretty suburb of Prospect Park was greatly excited over the daring robbery, and pursuers were already preparing to set out in hopes of overtaking the robbers, but they had too much of a start, and escaped in the darkness.

The officers returned to the city about 2 o'clock a.m., finding it impracticable to pur-

Rice, the "extravaganza" person, who had such a warm and even torrid time in the land of the Canuck with one of his productions, where the American flag was a feature of the show, made use of the whole affair as a first-class advertising medium for himself and his play. Rice seems not to have been taken seriously by the more sensible of the Canadian population, in his reported utterances where "give 'em the American flag" figured consplicuously as an indication of wordrous patriotism. Rice himself, when interviewed by Canadian press representatives, said that when in Canada he always made it a point to carry the Union Jack and display it in his shows, with the Stars and Stripes.

The Sage-Brousseau Case.

Mrs. Sage, who was referred to a court item printed in The Times yesterday as an undutiful daughter, who had induced her aged father to deed his property to her, and then neglected him, makes an explanation which gives the case a different aspect. She says that her father, desiring to will his property to his daughter, was advised by his attorney to make a deed outright to her to save trouble and expense. She says she has taken good care of her old father, but she has endeavored to restrict him in the inordinate use of wine, to which he is addicted, and, following bad counsel, has begun the suit against her to annul the deed.

The flippant attitude of the modern | tion to diet and rules of health, but ewspaper toward matters of great with the childish assumption, fostered public interest is illustrated by a short article in the Los Angeles Record for January 10. This picayune little sheet, which has, for a few months proportion to its size, like a grasshopper or a bullfrog, and has been industriously aping the style of bigger and better publications, in the desperate hope of planting itself in a journalistic field already fully occupied, published the following false, malicious and sensational little squib:

"FAKIR IN HOC.

"Chinese 'Physician' in Jail for Malpractice—His Advertising Agent to be Arrested—Some of Their Victims.
"A warant has been issued for the arrest of C. C. Platt, the advertising agent of Foo Yuen, a Chinese doctor doing business at No. 17 Bernard Place. The fake physician has himself been arrested upon charge of malpractice. He is not registered at the County Clerk's office, for he has not a certificate that would admit of his peligregistered. The Chinese fakir has for weeks past been advertising, deriding the methods of the modern schools of medicine, and claiming for the Chinese herbs and himself almost supernatural power to cure. Recently a man who was receiving treatment from him died by reason of the fact he did not receive proper medical care. This is one victim that is known. There are perhaps others who have lost their lives, and there are still others who are yet alive, but who have been skinned of their money by the clever advertising of this Chinese fraud."

The telegram described Shobo as a man five feet seven inches in height, weighing 140 pounds, with a scar on his right cheek. By 10 o'clock Aguirre landed his man at the County Jail.

The Deputy Sheriff found Shobo running a little fruit-stand on Main street, near the postoffice. He bought a sickel's worth of piñones in order to get a good look at the suspect. Then he strolled away, looked at him from a distance. At last he came back and told the fruit-dealer that he was under arrest. Shobo was scared out of his self-possession, acknowledged that he was the man, and offered Mr. Aguirre 1100 in money if he would let him go. But he found that bribery wouldn't work, so he looked up his shop and peacefully went to jail.

Other arrivals at the jail last night were Luke Brown, charged with outting government timber near Fresno; John Richter, accused of assault with a deadly weapon; Arthur Faba, seduction; Raymond Simpson, declared to be incorrigible, and a string of petty larcenists and vagrants.

The first, second and third denials in the above paragraph are simply matters of judicial record, and any person sufficiently interested may investigate them for himself. The fifth further explanation. The statement that we have claimed for our herbs almost pernatural power is simply absurd as any one will admit who has read our advertisements. We have constantly taken pains to assert in the most explicit language that there is no mystery about our methods; that our diagnoses depend entirely upon the pulse, which is the only true and scientific outward indication of the condition of the vital organs, the inoads of disease and the constitutional dgor of any person, and that our rem dies are nothing whatever but the simplest of herbs, which are delivered to those who choose to use them in packages for home preparation. write no prescriptions in dead languages. We make no spread-eagle claims to profound wisdom in the line of "specialties." We do not assert that medicines alone will cure any thing and everything. On the con-trary, we advise those who consult us rence to their health to prac tice the most extreme caution and selfdenial in matters of diet and regimen, constantly impressing upon their minds that every effort must be made to reinforce the action of the herbs and to give them a full opportunity to exercise their upbuilding and nutri-tive functions to the fullest extent in order to obtain the heat results. We order to obtain the best results. We do not even permit the use of tea, coffee, tobacco, liquors, or any other stimulants or narcotics whatever, in any cases for which we recommend the use of our herbal specifics. We constantly believe and attempt to inculcate upon the minds of others the truth that purity and simplicity in diet and in life are the greatest chief diet and in life are the greatest, chief and indispensable elements in regain-ing lost health; that without self-denial and restriction upon the part of less. In fact, we will not sell our herbs to persons who refuse to follow our advice in these respects. Yet the ir-responsible scribbler of the Record has the audacity to charge us with claiming for the Chinese herbs almost super-

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 17, 1896.

The Flowery Kingdom Herb Remedy Company.

My Dear Sirs: I desire to give you an expression of my sentiments in reference to certain scurrillous articles attacking your methods and characters which were recently published in some of the Los Angeles papers.

An experience of over twenty years with physicians and their poisonous drugs qualifies me to speak with emphasis. I have been through the hands of every recognized school of medicine, have also been to mineral springs, and recently went through the butchershop of the surgeon to the extent of having my head cut open, after which operation my case was pronounced inhaving my head cut open, after which operation my case was pronounced incurable. The experiment, for such it was, was undertaken for the purpose of reaching a trouble which Dr. Foo afterward, through an examination by the pulse, found to be seated in the vital organs. The contrast in the diagnosis has been emphasized by the results. The American physicians, could do nothing for me, while the relief which I have ubtained from your do nothing for me, while the relief which I have obtained from your herbal remedies is greater than I ever expected to realize, after my long and unsuccessful search among so-called scientists. This has proved to my satisfaction that Dr. Foo is what the others claimed to be, a strictly scientific physician, while their treatment was quackery, pure and simple.

B. C. Platt, Esq., City.
Dear Sir: Replying to your inquiry I wish to say that my recent change of residence shows my confidence ig. Dr. Foo and his methods. I had been a resident of Washington, D. C., but recently removed to Riverside. A few weeks ago I came to Los Angeles, where I have since lived, for the express purpose of receiving treatment of Dr. Foo. I may say, in brief, that, up to the present time, I am fully satisfied with the results of this treatment. I feel that it is impossible to ceeding, and a waste of effort as a lesson in politeness. We bear in mind, too, the frantic efforts of this little journalistic foundling to keep its head ment. I feel that it is impossible to overestimate its beneficial results or bug. I have found them more reasonable than the methods of any other zens of Los Angeles with a trifling thing that they don't want, a rag of the press that will soon be laid to rest in the graveyard of defunct journals. Farewell, Record, we will bother with a great deal of experience with doctors.

The price of these herbs seems very insignificent compared to results. I feel justified in saying that no person who patronizes Dr. Foo has the least reason to complain of his charges
I have noticed that Dr. Foo has the manners and instincts of a highly-polished gentleman, and that he would compare favorably in this regard with cultivated men from any part of the you no longer.

But for fear that some may think us less in earnest than we are, we dius less in earnest than we are, we disire to reproduce, as has been our custom heretofore, some of the opinions of our friends, people who have had the independence to investigate for themselves and to make up their own minds as to the merits of the remedies which we offer, regardless of the opinions of others.

Dr. T. Foo Yuen—Dear Sir: Recent malicious attacks on you and your methods call for a protest from your patients, to my mind the best judges of the merits of your treatment. You not only correctly diagnosed my case but have given me relief from suffering, either of which our modern school of physicians utterly failed to do. Other patients with whom I have conversed tell the same story. Merit must ever meet with opposition from envious cotemporaries.

Dr. Foo is not a fraud or a fakir, and Chinese medicine is not a humbug. Thirty years ago, in San Francisco, Dr. Li Po Tai, uncle of Dr. Foo, cured me of a case of inflammatory rheumatism after I had been abandoned by about all the white physicians in the city, or had abandoned them because I could get no relief from their remedies. I have had a great respect for Chinese medicine ever since. I also lived in China for several years and learned something about this system in its own home.

I am now 70 years of age, and am still following my profession as an architect. Some months ago I found myself in a very precarious condition, a complication of troubles producing results from which, according to the theories of our home doctors, there was no relief, except through a surgical

I have conversed with many of Dr. Foo's patients, and have noticed of late that some of those who, a few weeks ago, were greatly prejudiced, are beginning to lose this prejudice as they become better acquainted with the doctor and see more clearly the evidences of his skill. So strongly am I impressed with this fact that I wonder why our American physicians do not adopt some of these methods, or at least investigate them in a fair and candid spirit. In my opinion this uncandid spirit. In my opinion this un-warranted and unscholarly prejudice will wear away as the results of these methods become more manifest, and methods become more manifest, and we shall have the science of the Caucasian united to the skill and perse-verance and the persistence in the employment of harmless remedies of the Oriental. It is almost like losing a dollar bill

It is almost like losing a dollar bill and finding a two-dollar one, the way silverwood, the men's furnisher, is selling hosiery, underwear, neckwear, shirts, mackintoshes, etc. He is clearing out all broken lines and odds and ends; 50c ties at 25c; $1.50 percale shirts $1; $4 silk vests $2.75; a good mackintosh $4; $5 cane umbrellas $3; imported Maco hosiery in blacks and tans, two pairs for 25c. As they take account of stock January 31 and expect to have closed out all unreplaceable goods by that time, you'd better call as early as possible and get some of those values; it is now a by-word with almost everybody, in speaking of anything in men's furnishings. "If you buy it at silverwood's, it's good." Don't forget the place, No. 124 South Spring street. We all have hobbles and ride them to It is almost like losing a dollar bil

ARE CATHOLIC PRIESTS HYPO-CRITES?

The conversation here turned to the great strides lately made by the Catholic church in America, and as to the earnest work done by the priests, whereupon I asked:

"Your Eminence, there is one question I would like to put to you—not for information, for I think on that ground the question would be both a foolish and insulting one—but on the ground that many illiberal Protestants believe otherwise. The question is: Are all well-educated Catholics honest? Are your priests honest in their acceptance of all the truths of your church? Do you people believe what you preach?

"In other words," replied Cardinal Gibbons, "you want-ne, to answer the question as to whether Catholic priests are not as a rule hypocrites. The question is a wanter catholic priests.

But all this affords no clue to the mystery. Here is an Aslatic, first a débauché and later a religious fanatic; who has hardly seen a civilized city, or had a civilized man for his friend; who lives in the strictest seclusion, fearing instant assassination; who rules over a people ninetenths of whom look upon him as a political and religious usurper; who has seen during his reign vast territories detached from his kingdom; who has been crushed in a great war; who has let a powerful fleet go to utter ruin, and a splendid army totally degenerate; who, finally, was once the ally of Great Britain and France, and is now without a supporter among the nations. Yet he is able to defy Europe with impunity, to outrage the conscience of the civilized world; to trample under foot every solemn engage-

THE SULTAN'S SIGNA. ORE. months ago. A continental journalist turned up in Constantinople, at once had a long interview with the Sultan, left again immediately with £500 and a Turkish order, and his journal—one of the most influential in Europe—published a long article pooh-poohing the Armenian massacre and praising to the skies the Sultan's benevolent rule. The French press is reglarly bribed by the Turkish Embassy in Paris, just as it is by M. Blanc, the director of the Casino at Monte Carlo.

ABDUL HAMID A HARD WORKER.
To do the Sultan justice, he is a very

To do the Sultan justice, he is a very hard-working man. His ministers and creatures are liable to be summoned to Yildiz at any hour of the day or night. A man I know, supposed at Yildiz to have certain relations with the English nave certain relations with the English press, was roused at 7 o'clock one morning by an aide-de-camp of the Sultan in full uniform, and earried off then and there to the paiace, the messenger barely allowing him time to fing on a few corbes. He was so nervous at this sensational and hurried summons that he scribbled a note to me and left it at my rooms as he passed, saying that if he returned all right he would call upon me at noon. All the Sultan wanted was for him to telegraph a long message to the London Morning Post, couched in terms of aimost idiotic eulogy of Abdul Hamid and the condition of Turkey. In vain my acquaintance assured the Sultan that no English newspaper would dream of inserting such an article, no matter who sent it. The Sultan only replied by telling him to alter a few words if necessary, and to ask in return for anything he would like. One day I had an appointment with the later and the sultant of th was roused at 7 o'clock day I had an appointment with the late grand vizier at his house. The hour fixed was at 8 o'clock in the morning; and while I was drinking a cup of cof-fee in his antercom and while I was drinking a cup of coffee in his anteroom a smart carriage and pair dashed up, a palace officer sprang out, and a minute later Kiamil Pasha sent his secretary to me to beg me to excuse him, as he had that moment been urgently summoned to the Sultan's presence. Abdul Hamid's whim may demand the attendance of his ministers at any moment, while on the other hand, they may be unable to see him for a fortnight on business which they know to be urgent. For instance, when I was last in Constantinople, Kiamil Pasha had not been able to secure an audience for many days. He had been repeatedly to the paiace, sent in written reports, been kept waiting several hours, and then dismissed with a contemptuous verbal message brought to him by a eunuch. It must be borne in mind that whereas previously ministers of state, gathered in council at the Sublime Porte, the headquarters of the Ottoman government in Stamboul, used to exercise real powers, the Sultan acting upon their advice, Abdul Hamid has taken the reins of authority entirely into his own hands and today most of the ministers are the merest figureheads, having little more real influence over Turkish affairs than any readers of these lines. They are appointed and dismissed in accordance with petty personal mo-

hood. These are the people of the dagger, the pillow, the bowstring and the swift-running river. In the old centuries, when the foreign ambassadors were thrust into the imperial presence with the cry "Let the dogs come and be fed," a cannon boomed from Seraglio battlements as the strangled corpses of the victims of displeasure were flung into the Bosphorus. No cannon nowadays announces the tragedies of the Palace of the Star, but they occur all the same. There are plenty of dungeons there, and they have been full lately. Men told in whispers in Constantinople the other day how seventeen men had been bowstrung there in a single night. And any Turk who trusts you can tell you of a score of men who have recently been summoned to Yildiz and never seen again. Within its walls live the ex-Sultan Murad V, whom the Young Turkey, or Constitutional party," would—set upon the throne; and the white-faced son of Abdul Aziz and his ravishing Circassian. These knew well that the moment Abdul Hamid feels himself on the eve of deposition will be their last. They are cut off entirely from the outside world, and never a door opens behind them but they expect to hear the horrible inarticulate yelp of the mute hind them but they expect to hear the horrible inarticulate yelp of the mute executioner, springing upon them bow string in hand. Within the white executioner, springing upon them bow-string in hand. Within the whited sepulchre of Yildiz, at the end of this nineteenth Christian century, deeds are daily done of which one dare hardly think, beside which Sodom and Gomorrah were respectable communities. Yet Abdul Hamid II seems to si

the Balkan peninsula, preferring to wait till the ripe and rotten fruit shall wait till the ripe and rotten fruit snail drop into her lap, and the hands of the others are thereby paralyzed. And if the Sultan loses heart for a moment in the desperate game he is playing, he can find fresh courage by thinking, as Prof. Grosvenor in his great book has recently reminded us, that the British Embassy stands upon land presented to England in gratitude for help against France in 1801; that the site of the French Embassy was given to France in thankfulness for aid against England in 1807; that the shaft among the cypresses in the cemetery at Scutari commemorates English and French support against Russia in 1857, and that another column on the Bosphorus tells how Russia saved Mahmoud. If his empire in 1833. "You think us weak," said a Turkish statesman recently to a foreign ambassador, "but in truth we are very strong, for our strength is rooted in your divisions."

has attached to the axie of his front wheel. But there are two or three things to be borne in mind—The first is that on most roads the mileposts, so-called, are not put down accurately. As an engineer remarked, in talking on the subject: "I've done that sort of work myself, and I know how it is done. One of the things aimed at is to put the milestone at a corner every time, if possible, and so they are often several rods out of the way. It is safe always to take the cyclometer in preference to the mileposts, for it is constructed on scientific principles and is bound to be accurate." CHATS WITH TWO GREAT DIVINES ON LIVE RELIGIOUS Cardinal Gibbons Hopes for a Universal Catholicism—He Answers the Question Are Catholic Priests Hypocrites? and Tells Why They Should Do Better Work Than Protestant Preachers - He Discusses the Sunday Question and Other Matters.

Dr. Talmage Predicts a Universal Christianity-Gives the Results of His Travels Among the Missionaries of the World and Discusses Free Thought at Home-Pills Wanted Rather Than Philosophy. Cardinal Gibbons and the Smallpox Patient.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—I give you today interviews which I have just had with two of the greatest leaders of religious thought in the United States. I refer to His Eminence, James Cardinal Gibbons of Baltimore and the Rev. T.

De Witt Talmage of Washington, Car-De Witt Talmage of Washington. Cardinal Gibbons is the broadest and the biggest man in the Catholic church. Dr. Talmage is the broadest and one of the greatest of the Protestants. My interviews with Cardinal Gibbons took place in the cardinal's house at Baltimore. This is a big gray-stone build-ing of many rooms, situated in the heart of the city, just back of the cathedral. Passing up wide stone steps to ever be a universal religion.

A UNIVERSAL RELIGION. My first question was as to whether His Eminence thought there would

He replied: "I hope so, but when it will come I cannot say. The world is becoming more Christianlike every day, and we are, I hope, gradually nearing the time when there will be a universal Christianity."

I here asked whether he thought that this universal religion would be the ever be a universal religion.

at it! What is there in the life of a priest to make it the choice of a hypocrite. The man who would devote himself to it has to give up the most of the things which the world holds dear. I will not mention all of them, but I will take only one. For instance, that of personal chastity. The priest can never marry. When he decides to enter the ministry he must give up the hope of wife, children and home, and must devote himself, soul and body, to the church. This, in many cases, would prevent men from becoming priests. The life of the priesthood is not an easy one. It is one of hardship and subordination. The priest is subject to be sent, at the will of his superiors, anywhere, at any time. He may be ordered to the wildest countries of the world, and he must go. His whole life is given up to the serving of his people, and it is his duty to visit the pest-houses, and to minister to the sick there, even at the risk of his life."

A STORY OF CARDINAL GIBBONS.

As Cardinal Gibbons said this, my mind went hearts.

As Cardinal Gibbons said this, my mind went back over his career, and I remembered an incident in it which remembered an incident in it which shows that he believes what he says and that in the past he has had the courage of his convictions. It was long before he had any hope of being a cardinal. It was when he was a humble priest in a country parish near Baltimore. Smallpox had broken out in his village, and all of his parishloners who were able had fled from the town. One noor old neare, who had the disease. One poor old negro who had the disease lay at the point of death. He had been deserted by his friends and family, who had left him neither food nor medihad left him neither food nor medicine. The young priest heard of the case and hastening to the dying negro's side he remained with him until the last. Then the question came as to his burial. There was no one who would raise a hand at the risk of his life to aid in carrying the corpse to the grave. Father Gibbons was left alone with the dead. It did not take him long to make up his mind. He determined to be undertaker as well as minister, and so having obtained a coffin he piaced the body in it, and in some way or other dragged it to the grave. He put it in the ground, performed the last rites of the church over it and buried it, and then went on with his work among the sick.

WHY CATHOLIC PRIESTS SHOULD work among the sick.
WHY CATHOLIC PRIESTS SHOULD DO MORE THAN PROTESTANT

PREACHERS.

As I thought of this, I realized that As I thought of this, I realized that this man's ideal of a Christian life was higher than that of many other religious men I have known. I wondered if there were many of his kind in the church, and I asked him if he thought that Catholic priests were really of more value in their work in the church than Protestant preachers. "That I cannot answer," replied the cardinal. "I do not want to criticise any man. I will only say that I think they ought to be. They have, in the first place, their whole time to devote to their work. Suppose I, for instance, had a wife and family. I could not accomplish as much as I do now. My income, I suppose, is what would not be considered small, but had I wife and family I could not give as much to contain the contains of the considered small, but had I wife and family I could not give as much to contain the contains of the contains t family I could not give as much to charity as I do now, nor would I be free to go at all times where the necessities of my business call me. Or, per-haps, I can better illustrate it to you haps, I can better illustrate it to you by supposing a case of two newspaper men. Both have started on their journalistic careers. They are evenly prepared as to intellectual ability and education. Each has his own place to make in his profession. Suppose one should say, I am going to get married and have a good time. I am going to do what I can, but I will enjoy all the good things of life as I go along, and modeling his career on this basis, he begins his newspaper work. His family and social life take up a great part wonder if you realize now long it takes them to prepare themselves for their work. It requires twelve years of hard study for the best of masters before they are deemed worthy to have charge of a church. The boy who feels that he is called by the Lord to the priester. he is called by the Lord to the priest-hood, having already received a large-part of his common school education, has, at the age of 15, to go into a college and to remain there for six years, studying the ordinary branches, the sclences, etc., in connection with his religious work, and at the end of this time he has six years more of theo-logical training. He is associated with the best minds of the church, and these twelve years are, as a rule, those of the hardest kind of study and work."

THE SUNDAY QUESTION. The conversation here turned to the Sunday question, and I asked the car-dinal as to whether he was in favor of Sunday question, and I asked the cardinal as to whether he was in favor of the European or the Puritan Sunday. He replied that he was in favor of Sunday observance, but that his ideal Sunday was not the Puritan, nor was it the European Sunday. Said he: "I like the closing of the shops and all kinds of business on Sunday, and I think it is a blessing for Baltimore and for all of our cities that this is compulsory. I think all kinds of work should be stepped on that day. I hope we shall never have the European Sunday in America. Sunday should be a day of religious rest, but it also should be a day for innocent recreation. I do not think it wrong for a man to go out riding with his family on Sunday afternoons, nor to take a walk in the fields. I think that it should be a day of cheerfulness without dissipation, of religious enjoyment without sadness or melancholy. The Puritan Sunday goes too far, and the Ideal Sunday is the golden mean."

Cardinal Gibbons has the broadest ideas as regards capital and labor. He believes in labor organizations, but frowns upon the walking delegate, and says that whoever tries to sow discorribetween the capitalist and the laborer is an enemy to social order. He has many times had great influence with the laboring classes in time of strikes, and has done much to harmonize the differences which exist between them and their employers. He is an enthusiastic American, thoroughly believing in the separation in this country of church and state, and an enthusiastic patriot upon all occasions.

paroxysms of nervous activity. He has large ears, a large nose, large lips, large hands and large feet. His eyes are grayish, his hair is thin and dark like his beard; his teeth are long and yellow, and his complexion is like parchment that has been roughly folded a dozen times. That is, everything in his appearance contradicts the idea that he is an Osmant—a pure Turk. In fact, he is an Armenian, His mother was an Armenian slave, and, unless all tradition, lies, his father was not the Sultan Abdul Mejid, but the latter's Armenian gardener. The Turks to a man call him "the bastard," and tell you with many circumstantial details how his mother lavished upon the plebeian of her own race the favors which she succeeded in witholding from her alien, if august lord and master. In this fact of his origin is to be found the secret of the Sultan's intense and unreasoning hatred of the Armenian race, and also the explanation of many practical qualities of statesmanship in which he cxcels the Turk. For the Armenians are the Jews of Turkey, the buyers and sellers, the money-lenders and usurers, the bookkeepers, the speculators, the commercial parasites. Thus, though Abdul Hamid II has played with success many a game in which a Turk would have been utterly worsted, and though he is in name and positon the thirty-fourth man who has girded on the sword of Osman in the sacrosanct Mosque of Eyoub on the Sweet Waters of Europe, he does not really belong to that race which Freeman declares to have produced more great leaders of men than any other that has ever existed. He is 52 years old and he succeeded his cider brother, the deposed Murad V, three months after the latter succeeded his cider brother, the deposed Murad V, three months after the latter succeeded his cider brother, the deposed Murad V, three months after the latter succeeded his cider brother, the deposed Murad V, three months after the latter succeeded his cider brother, the deposed Murad V, three months after the latter succeeded his cider brother, the deposed Mu large hands and large feet. This man, I say, is the greatest mystery of our time. Morover, I do not believe anybody lives who can explain him. Certainly, I make no pretense to do so, but I have recently been studying him at rather close range, and that I am not without some sufficients who can be sufficiently as the sum of the same and that I am not without some life to the lock of his rife bids you to pause, and that I am not without some life to the continuous contents. tense to do so, but I have recently been studying him at rather close range, and that I am not without some intimate knowledge of his movements is perhaps proved by the fact that I knew, and published in the London Chronicle, his acceptance of the project of Armenian reforms twenty-four hours before any one else in Europe. Therefore, I may perhaps throw a little light upon the mystery.

THE PERSON OF ABDUL HAMID. Take the outward man first. Abdul Hamid II is short, bent in the back, languid in movement, with occasional paroxysms of nervous activity. He has large ears, a large nose, large lips, no doubt whatever of that. I believe it because God never launched a failure. The only salvation for this world is the Christian religion. Its acceptance by all people—and, the carrying a great supply. We have new churches because there are men to fill them; and the size of our churches and their number increase every year. More money is spent on religion now than ever before. The Christian stands higher in the community; and the day has now come when men are not afraid of being called Christians. In some respects the churches have changed. Religion is more liberal, and more a matter of the soul. The fences between the sects are being lowered. Christians are becoming united, and they are working together. The old questions of sect and doctrine are passing away, and we are nearing the condition of a united Christianity. Take the doctrinal sermons. The people will not stand them now as they did in the past. They want matter that will help them, and they don't care as to quibbles about the letter of the law. Preaching doctrinal sermons is like having a physician, who, calling upon you when you are sick, instead of giving you something to help you, delivers a lecture on physiology. You tell him at once that you don't care as to the length of your intestines or the location of the bones. What you want is pills rather than philosophy, and you want them quick. The sermon in demand today is that which is helpful to man. Here is a body with the old cut of sin and trouble running across its back and over its head. There is the preacher, the physician who brings the gospel of Christ, the one plaster which will heal the wounds. "The yearon onticed the great change "ChRISTIANITY IN THE KITCHENS." Isolation of Individuality.

(G. W. Robertson:) Alone must every son of man meet his trial hour. The individuality of the soul necessitates that. Each man is a new soul in this world, untried, with a boundless possible before him. No one can predict what he may become, prescribe his duties or mark out his obligations. Each man's own nature has its own peculiar rules, and he must take up his life-plan alone and preserve in it a perfect privacy, with which no stranger intermeddleth. Each man's temptations are made up of a host of peculiarities, internal and external, which no other mind can measure. You are tried alone. Alone you pass into the desert; alone you must bear and conquer in the agony; alone you must be sifted by the world. There are moments known only to a man's own self, when human advice is mavailable, that the soul feels what it is to be alone. . . The philosopher tells us that no atom in creation touches another atom. They only approach within a certain distance, then the attraction ceases, and an invisible something repels; they

(Exchange:) "My mother's habit," says Archdeacon Farrar, "was every day, immediately after breakfast, to withdraw for one hour to her own room, and to spend that hour in reading the Bible, in meditation and prayer. From that hour, as from a pure fountain, seed of the formal unruffled by all the worries and pettishness which are so often the intolerable trial of narrow neighborhoods. As I think of her life, and of all it had to bear, I see the absolute triumph of Christian grace in the lovely ideal of a Christian lady. I never saw her temper disturbed; I never heard her speak one word of anger or calumny, or of idle gossip; I never heard her speak one word of anger or calumny, or of idle gossip; I never observed in her any sign of a single sentiment imbecoming to a soul which had drunk of the river of the water of life, and which had fed upon the manna in the barren wilderness. The world is the better for the passage of such souls across its surface. They may seem to be as much forgotten as the drops of rain which fail into the barren sea, but each drop adds to the volume of refreshful and purifying waters. The healing of the world is in its nameless saints. A single star seems nothing, but a thousand scattered stars break up the night and make it beautiful."

THE MORNING SERMON

THE DESCENT OF GOODNESS."

(CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.) BY REV, CHARLES M. SHEPHERD,

Newspaper preaching illustrates the progress of man. John Baptist or Ber-nard could only reach men within voice range. For a hearing they must voice range. For a hearing they must rely on antecedent sympathy. Nowa-days the prophet pours his burden straight into the ears of nations, and for audience depends on his skill to eatch the curious eye of the journal reader. There is no visible solidarity in his congregation. He is as one that commits a vessage to the winds or floods. One knows not what shores may entertain his thoughts, nor what influence may bear them on. Such a vocation is indeed spiritual. It involves inlimited faith in the potency of truth

Consider the diversity of conditions and motives among those that read these words. Some of you have faith in God, others hold the opinions of Col. Ingersoll. Many are loyal servants of the church, very many regard her with indifference or dislike. Multitudes rest in the orthodox view of Christ, myriads behold him through the medium of Renan's philosophy. One of you reads in the luxurious environments of a palace, turning to his paper out of the ennui of over-satisfied desire. Another may sit like a fettered galley-slave amidst the squalor of slums or sweat-shops. We could hardly reach a common mind on any question of politics, religion or social order. Nevertheless, friends, there is an absolute ground of sympathy. It is the conception of the good man. Here is an ideal that possesses the race. I hold it up before the polished examples of civilization, they bow in homage. I show it to Congo savages, they do it reverence. Livingstone was a hero in the African jungle, only more a hero in London drawing-rooms.

This is no new idea; rather, one old as Abraham or the myth of Prometheus. Yet it has undergone developments. Once the light of the good life was local and meteoric, now it is solar and constant. Formerly men looked backward for it far down the vistas of the good have displaced the old mythologies. Now we look everywhere, not for haunting nymph or fairy, but for the traces of earth's benefactors.

Note again that the formative process is inductive. Just as the artist makes up a physical type from a thousand variant forms, so we turn to affluent life for a composite portrait of goodness. The splendid image rises before us. We know it as we know our mothers. There is the luminousness of of Newton, the harmony of Beethoven, the grandeur of Milton, the beauty of Raphael. It has the uprightness of Washington, the humanity of Lincoln, the elevation of Aifred, the compassion of Florence Nightingale. The magnificent frieze of the worthy passes endlessly. Like the fabled spirit lost in space, we cry, "Is there no en three rival principles; namely, that man is made to kill and be killed; that have faith in the honesty of their professions, and I believe that they do as much good perhaps as any other religious sect. I tell you there is more religion in our kitchens than in our parlors; and you will find as much true Christianity among the Catholic servants as among the Protestant mistresses. I have had two Catholic girls in my employ for years, and they have as much faith in their religion as I have in mine."

We are now prepared for the question: What is the origin of goodness? Of God." How momentous the consequences: The child shares the fortunes of the parents, the career of the good is the future of God. Say, if you will, "He that doeth good is of the primordial vacuum, the background of the findividuality of the soul necessitates that. Each man is a new soul in this world, untried, with a boundless possible before him. No one can predict what he may become, prescribe his duries or mark out his obligations. Each man's own nature has its own peculiar rules, and he must take up his life-plan alone and preserve in it a perfect privacy, with which no stranger intermed dleth. Each man's temptations are made up of a host of peculiarities, internal and external, which no other mind can measure. You are tried alone. Alone you pass into the desert; alone you must bear and conquer in the agony; alone you must be sifted by the world. There are moments known only to a man's own self, when human advice is man's own the content of the actual kingdom of God. "How the hist of self-garder whether our principle is like plant the self-garder whether our principle is like plant word of the Lord is tried." Good and evil, light and darkness are the Titan antagonists, and when the victors are crowned, all intelligences shall declare "Just and righteous is the Lord."

Again, the goodness of time is not only experimental, but illuminative. It is not only submitted to the choice of mortals, but they are required to exercise their sagacity in the discernment of its possibilities. Let us ask: What is the ultimate form of goodness? Is it not love? Without love, goodness is not goodness. In what direction does the energy of love act? The organized affection of the family, starting with the single pair and utilizing ties of blood, but spreading by a leavening process to communities, nations and worlds.

the universal family, are interdependent thoughts. But we have a unitying prinelple. It is the Copernican idea of theology. Holding the family conception of the Cosmos, revelation becomes a necessary thought. Mutual communion is the law of the family.
Revelation will come first in vital forms. The heroic deeds, the prayers, the lyric raptures, the righteous thoughts of goodness, will be the primary revelation. Inspiration has a necessary relation to character. "He that doeth good is of God." The good, who are nearest to God, and enjoy most of his spirit, have the broadest horizon. But the goodness of life will, by the law of fitness, crystallize and endure in the form of literature. Such literature will not be philosophic or theological, but warm, plastic, poetic,
the very transcript of the gody life,
Then, as the impulse of goodness, the life of God in the world is benevolent and pitiful, revelation will develop more and more in the form of redemptive love and will find its climax in some transcendent life.

In a world of moral freedom and evsolutionary growth, the life of Jesus is what we, should expect. The rise of the kingdom of God is as inevitable in the sequence of history as the renascence, or the modern scientific era. Yet, the reconciliation of God and His children will not be sentimental, but according to spiritual law. I govern my child by a moral ideal which transcends his crude and wilful mind. One thing only is intelligible, the love that transfuses and glorifies the discipline. The father is right, because he is father and loves his son. Then later the child, come to reflection, deliberately approves the discipline, till now sanctioned by love. "Father was right." So the deprayed heart is first transfixed and fused at the spectacle of the cross. Later in the process of Christian development comes the verdict of

So the deprayed heart is first transfixed and fused at the spectacle of the cross. Later in the process of Christian development comes the verdict of conscience: "That thou mightest be just and the justifier of the ungodly." The new moral life of the world, receiving so mighty an impulse in the gospel, will now embody itself in dogma, rite, polity and conduct. We need not trouble ourselves about the church. If she be, indeed, of God, she will justify her existence. Otherwise, we care not. The kingdom of God is sufficient unto itself.

We close with the thought of irrepressible choice. He that doeth good is of God. Your election lies, not between warring creeds, but the good and the bad. The good is precisely what your heart, every heart, approves, God holds up the resplendent roster of those that have blessed the world. The name of Jesus heads the roil. All the rest are in organic connection with Him. He is the first-born among many brethren. The goodness He offers you is not academic, cloistered or sentimental, but energetic, potent, social and epentrative. Oh, divided heart, God and His family have need of you. While you are wandering in the forest, a kingdom greater than Alfred's awaits you.

MANHOOD. True Christian manhood consists as much in living a good life outside the pale of the church, at home, and in the world, as it does in being good at prayer-meetings and other church assemblages.—(Rev. John Evans, Baptist, Westerly.

POLITICS AND BUSINESS. The best men, the pursest and strongest, ought to be in politics, but not to make it a business. The path of politics as a business is the most dangerous which one can walk.—(Rev. J. E. Smith, Methodist, Camden, N. J.

DOGS. Heredity and environment play upon human nature, on character. I had a Scotch terrier I brought from Texas. He was a ratter from Ratters-ville. I got a poodle and he became just as good ratter by association.—Rev. Sam Jones, at Augusta, Ga.

LEGAL MURDER. War is legalized murder. No argument, however finely spun. can change that dictum.

LEGAL MURDER. War is legalized murder. No argument, however finely spun, can change that dictum. War is a school for thieves, robbers and murderers. It teaches men the art of strategy, lying, theft and killing. It hardens human nature.—Dr. Joseph Silverman, Hebrew, New York City.

UNITARIANISM. Unitarianism means that there is a band of men and women who dare to think. It means the deepening, the heightening of the conscience; the declaration of human right; the assertion that what is good down here is good up there.—(Rev. Minot J. Savage, at Providence, R. I.

THE CHURCH. While the church must be in the world, the world must not be permitted in the church. The church is like a river; insist that it be kept pure. The church is a temple; keep it from decay. The church is like an army; it must be true to its spirit and mission, and be loyal to its commander.—(Rev. T. E. Busfield, Baptist, Utica, N. Y.

THE STANDARD OF PURITY. The standard of purity has been steadily raised and it is steadily raised and it is steadily raised and it is steadily rising. Neither Swift nor Sterne would be tolerated today in any Christian pulpit. The tone of English literature has been greatly elevated since that time, and, moreover, it is cause for gratitude that pure and healthy literature is, nowadays, quite as cheap as that which is filthy and degrading.—(Rev. James McLeod, Presbyterian, Scranton, Pa.

WAR. War means a picture too horrible to contemplate; it means sacred relationships broken; it means socred relationships broken; it means sacred relationships broken; it means sa ninheritance of poverty to our descendants. War is a relic of barbarism, a brutal device of savagery. It has no place in Christian civilization today.—(Archdeacon E. S. Rousmenulere, Episcopalian, New Bedford, Mass.

POLITENESS. Politeness costs little but it pays well. Courtesy in the home is like morning sunshine pouring in at every window. An employer can well afford to be polite to an employe, for it makes the workingman do better work and binds together the two classes in a beautiful fellowship. In the effort to settle the differences between capital and labor, if we could bring into the controversy more courtesy and less bitterness of speech it would help amazingly in solving the question.—(Rev. God is behind this general craze for out-door sports. Men now need health, and God will give it to them, just as He gave the world steam and electricity after many years, it was at a time when most needed. Out of this improvement in health is to come a race of strong men and women, who will be the greatest tollers ever known in the kingdom of God.—(Rev. J. E. Smith, Methodist, Trenton, N. J.

THE UNPARDONABLE SIN. The unpardonable sin is the act of one who is highly enlightened and at the same time very malicious against God. Light respecting spiritual things and malice against the person, work or offices of the Holy Ghost are the essentials. In many ways man may commit such a sin, and he who would not sin beyond forgiveness must take heed how he trifles with holy things. ENGLAND AND AMERICA. Have you thought for a moment what a war between England and America would mean? It would be a war between the two greatest Christian nations of the earth. It would mean vastly more than what is involved in the boundary dispute between England and Venedenute. than what is involved in the boundary dispute between England and Venezuela. It would be a calamity from which the cause of Christianity would not recover for centuries. It would result in the fatal disturbance of those special composerial and any or the composerial and suit in the fatal disturbance of those social, commercial and spiritual relations which year by year have been drawing England and America closer together. JONAH AND, THE WHALE. The story of Jonah and the whale, interpreted by liberalists, has been a most prolific cause of skepticism. More ridicule has been aimed at the Bible because of this than any other one thing. The religious world has been more disastrously afflicted over the attempt to swallow the whale than the whale was with Jonah; and a great deal of faith has been thrown out in the attempt to dispose of Jonah. As long as Talmages defend the story as literally true, Ingersolls will ridicule it as absurdly false. As long as one insists on having Jonah swallowed, the other will enjoy drawing word pictures of Jonah "dodging rapidly around to escape the gastric juice." or "sitting on a posterior molar, wiping the sweat from his forehead and anxiously looking out for signs of land."—(Rev. L. H. Squires, Universalist, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Do not think that, after you have bought not think that, after you have bought or sold, of studied or taught, you will go into your closet and open your Bible and repair the damage of the loss when your daily life has left you. Do those things certainly, but also insist that your buying or selling, or studying or teaching, shall itself make you brave, patient, pure and holy.

Do not let your occupation pass you by, and only leave you the basest and poorest of its benefits—the money with which it fills your purse. This is the life that, indeed, "catches the quality of the life of God;" and still it is a life possible to every one of us.

LAY SERMONS.

There are many professing Christians who seem to get but little satisfaction who seem to get but little satisfaction out of the religion which they profess. It is a religion which lacks vitality and power, and it does not form a part of the every-day life of its possessor as it should do. It does not lift him above and out of self. I have discovered that just so long as self is the center around which we result. which we revolve, life is narrow and selfish, and empty in the extreme. There must be a broader outlook and a higher purpose to engage us than the horizon that bounds our own individual life and purposes, for he who lives to himself alone becomes groveling in his nature, and the infinite expansion of universal being is all lost sight of Look up, look up to the smiling he of God's providence and care, instead of fixing your eyes upon the petty affairs of life than concern you alone. There is no one so happy as he who gives joy to others and helps to lighten the burdens of the world. Christ is never so near to us as when we are doing His will and exemplifying His spirit in our every-day practice. And with Him for a companion and helper there is peace within our hearts.

O, if we could always remember what a small part of our being this life is! If we could always remember what a small part of our being this life is! If we could always remember what as well as the beginning, and that through all things the thread of His divine purpose runs, should we not be more submissive, more joyous, more willing that His will should be done? If we had never before seen the clouds gather, the rains fall, and the clear shining of the sun cease, as we see it in our winter storms, should we not conclude that the end of all natural beauty had come, rather than that out of the storm fresh beauty would be born, beauty more glorious in its perfected loveliness than that dimmed by the clouds and the rain? And even so do we not forget sometimes that out of the rain of sorrow greater spiritual beauty may spring and a more perfect Christian life be evolved.

Sorrow is a wonderful sculptor, chiseling and moulding ofttimes the inner life into marvelous beauty. The rain of tears bring forth, sometimes a wondrous harvest of gladness. Watch it, and you will see slowly budding a tenderness for others which else you had never known. Out of the watered soil of your heart you will discover the tenderness for others which else you had never known. Out of the watered soil of your heart you will discover the tenderness for others which else you had never known hide, and which can be more casily uproofed, and the warm sun of God's love will bring the growth of character, the strength of purpose that you need for that rich unfolding oil life that will give you joy. Character is something that must ripen, like all other (Stockton Independent:) Professor Pierce of the Los Angeles Normal School says graduates of public and high schools have very little practical knowledge of the English language, and he ought to know. It may be some consolation to Californians to know that the defect is not peculiar to its schools. Harvard examiners have found a similar lack of knowledge in applicants for admission to that university. One of the most severe criticisms of the applicants was based on their translations from Latin. The critic said they looked like efforts to translate from one unknown tongue to another that was but little understood.

GRANT'S CAMPAIGN.

Incidents from the Memories of Missouri Veterans.

March Against Harris's Home Guard.

How Grant Got a Fine Saddle Hors low He Quieted a Suffering Child-Entertaining Confederate Sympathizers.

(CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.) Comparatively few, even among close students of Gen. Grant's career, are well informed concerning the great commander's first campaign in the civil commander's first campaign in the civil war. His own memories regarding it are partly detailed in his book, and gray-haired residents of Monroe and Shelby counties, Missouri, yet tell how the young colonel at the head of his "wild regiment" marched through their country and showed how a military officer, even though he wore the blue, could respect civil law and the rights of the people.

Gen. Grant went to Missouri after Gov. Jackson had threatened to tear up the "Yankee railroad" as the Hannibal and St. Joe was termed. This was the first ine of railroad to connect the east with the great western plains. Its projectors, finding it impossible to raise money for its construction oth-erwise, had appealed to the government and had received a land grant of 600,000 acres. In return for this a clause had been inserted in its char-ter, providing that in time of war the road should be at the disposal of the Federal government. Gov. Jockson's threat had caused the railroad company's officers to appeal in person to President Lincoln for military protection. In response, Mr. Lincoln or-dered Col. Robert F. Smith, with the Sixteenth Illinois Volunteers, to Hannibal to protect the railroad and other government property.

By a daring stroke Gen. Lyon, in connection with Frank P. Blair, had saved the arsenal at St. Louis from Jackson, who had attempted to seize it. Immediately afterward, although as a State Missouri decided to be neutral, and its people, in the February convention, had declared against leaving the Union, the sleeping fires of revoit blazed up all over the State. The stragetic point of North Missouri lay in Shelby and Monroe counties, where the three forks of the Sait River pass between precipitous banks of silurian in Shelby and Monroe counties, where the three forks of the Salt River pass between precipitous banks of silurian rock. On the banks of Middle Fork, in an almost impregnable retreat, the Confederate general, Harris, established a recruiting camp, and thither companies of Missouri's "home guard" were flocking when Gen. Lyon, early in July ordered Col. Smith to break up the camp. Smith was a bungler at best, and in so treacherous a country, with a foe who knew every foot of the ground, he soon found that the faster he retreated from Salt River the better it would be for him. At Monroe City he entrenched himself in the seminary building and there endured a two days' slege, while the surrounding country swarmed with those who had cast in their lot with the Confederate cause. The news of the slege was telegraphed to Washington, and both Grant and Palmer were ordered to the rescue. At that time Grant, then colonel of the Twenty-first Illinois Infantry, was encamped or the Illinois River waiting for a steamer, that was aground on a sandbar, to convey his regiment to St. Louis.

He proceeded at once to Quincy and thence over the Hannibaland St. Josep's road to the scene of battle; but when he arrived there on the afternoon of July 13, the sport was all over. Gov. Wood and Col. Palmer had both preceded him and had put the Confederate forces to flight. On this point Grant, in his autibiography, makes the, same error that is made by other historians who have written of the var in Missouri; but it is not surprising that the more weighty achievements of his brilliant career should have effaced the details whacker in that section of the State. Owen himself was in hiding and it had been reported that all the water and milk on the place had been polsoned for the benefit of the Federal invaders. The only human being found on the place was an old negress and the soldiers, who were exceedingly dry after their march in the July sun, at once set her to work supplying their wants. With cocked revolvers they compelled her to drink milk with each of them, and when she had imbibed some four or five gallons and was duly miserable, Catlett said to her:

"Auntie, we want Mr. Owen's horse that is tied down in the woods."

"Land a Massy!" ejaculated the frightened negress, "who done tole you Massa Owen's hoss was tied back ob de spring house?"

The soldier was not slow in availing himself of the information he had thus slyly wrung from the old darky woman, and while his companions were content to pick up stray plugs and mules from the neighboring pastures Catlett rode into Monroe on John Owen's blooded saddler.

The horses, fifteen in number, were tied to the rack in front of, the seminary and Col. Grant, who was a good judge of horsefiesh, surveyed them a moment in silence. Summoning his adjutant, he said, "Lead that bay horse to my tent." Catlett's heart sank as he saw his prize led away by the order of a superior officer.

At Pittsburgh Larding, the evening before Shiloh, the two men met again. Catlett, who was now a captain under Sherman, was discussing the beginning of the war in Missouri. "General," he said, "do you remember the horse you took at Monroe?"

"Indeed I do," Grant replied. "I never rode a more intelligent animal. He had evidently seen service before he fell into my hands. Poor fellow, he was shot under me at Donelson."

"You stole that horse from me," laughed Catlett.

"Oh, well," returned Grant, with an indulgent smile, "you stole him from some other fellow. It is a way we have in war."

However, Grant was not lax in his construction of the terms "meum" and "tuum." The people through whose tegritory he marched had rights that must be respected, and his men knew better than to trifle with their commander's orders on this point.

structed, and under cover of its guns the workmen rebuilt the bridge. During the next two weeks Grant devoted himself to drilling his men and fortifying himself for the conflict in which he must soon engage. The summons came soon enough. Tom Harris's home guard camp on the Middle Fork, which had been too much for Col. Smith, must be broken up, and this time the task was assigned to Col. Grant. Never before had he been called upon to act on his own responsibility, and it was with feelings of deep anxiety that he prepared for the fifteen-mile march to Florida.

The baggage of the army must be transported in wagons, and the colonel found himself in need of some lumber for the construction of higher side-boards. In front of a grocery store, kept by a man by the name of Thie-hoff, lay a pile of boards, and these the soldiers proceeded to appropriate. Other Federal officers had given their men license to take what was needed without restraint, but from Col. Grant's regiment the people were accustomed to no vexation, and the owner of the

Being answered in the affirmative, the soldier reached up to pluck the fruit that caused the fall in Eden, when he observed the glistening barrel of a rifle leveled upon him.

"Drop that apple!" thundered the guard.

But he said I might have it," the soldier protested.

"Makes no difference what he said," the guard replied. "I have orders to shoot the first man that touches an apple."

The July sun was setting when the shoot the first man that touches an apple."

The July sun was setting when the advance guard reached the summit of the hill that commands a view of the enemy's camp. The awful responsibility of his position at the moment carried Grant's heart into his mouth. He had never before been in command, and he longed for some one to issue the orders, but, with the determination of necessity, he spurred his horse on and rode to the head of his regiment. Before him lay spread out the picturesque valley of Salt River, but where was the foe he had marched fifteen miles to encounter? An old red wagon and the ashes of a campfire, alone marked the spot where Brig.-Gen. Harris and his rebel hosts had been encamped. Blankly Grant gazed on the deserted valley, when the thought occurred to him that Harris had take fright at his approach and had run away from him.

A MEMORIAL BREAKFAST.

Meanwhile, the news had been carried into Florida that a force of Union soldiers had encamped on the banks of Salt River. In all that town there was but one Union man, Dr. James Goodler, an Englishman by birth, and he at once proceeded to the camp. After an exchange of courtesies, he invited the colonel to his home to supper. Grant declined with thanks, but sald he would present himself with his adjutant next morning in time for breakfast. A MEMORIAL BREAKFAST.

said he would present himself with his adjutant next morning in time for breakfast.

The monster elm under which Grant slept that night still stands, and is regarded with almost superstitious reverence by the people. Just across the river stood the pleturesque old mill, and on its dam the two men crossed. Grant was not in uniform, but wore a suit of brown tweed, with tall, white silk hat. His clay-bank horse, with the one he had acquired from Catlett, was left on the other side of the river, and Col. Grant entered Florida on foot. As they descended the winding road to the town, the first human habitation they reached was the old house in which Mark Twain was born.

Orders had been given to the soldlers not to enter the town; but while Grant was waiting at the drug store of Dr. Goodler to be taken up to breakfast, one of his men entered. As soon as he espled the colonel, he said sheepishly to the proprietor, "Do you keep tobacco here?"

LONGEVITY IN "OUR ITALY." CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.

Which of you by taking thought can add one cubit unto his stature?" And which of you dwellers in the frozen East, by taking thought, may not add years unto his life, whether it be more or less that the allotted three score and ten, by exchanging your ice and snow, and cold, bleak winds for the sunshine, flowers and balmy breezes of Southern California? Scientific men who have made a study of the subject agree that this can be done. But it does not need the statement of a scientific man to convince us that life may be prolonged in a land where it is possible to live out of doors nearly the entire year. Observant travelers to California in the early days, before the country was settled by the whites, frequently mentioned the beauty and symmetry of the native women, and the fine physique and endurance of the men. In fact, not only does the climate induce longevity, but it tends to enlarge the chest, improve the physique, and give endurance.

A short time ago'I called upon a living example of the longevous quality of our climate in the person of Don Francisco Garcia, who is 114 years old. Don Garcia was baptized when but three days old in the church of San José de Gracia on the 4th day of May, 1781. This old man-may be seen daily walking about the streets of Los Angeles, and he will tell you that he is well. And this is but one of many cases of advanced age among the natives. At the Cabrillo celebration in 1892, there appeared three old Indian women, whose ages aggregated 340 years. They were Rosa, 126 years old; Juana, who was 116 years of age, and the youngest, Maria Antonia, 106 years old. Chief Cabazon, of the Cahuilla Indians, died in 1848 at the advanced age of 140 years. When Father Ubach took charge of the San Diego Mission, founded in 1769, he met a number of Indians who had assisted at the building of the mission, and many of whom were living within the last twenty years.

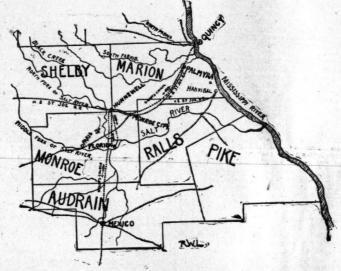

Dr. Edward Palmer, who was long connected with the Agricultural De-ing of the mission, and many of whom were living within the last twenty years.

Dr. Edward Palmer, who was long connected with the Agricultural Department of the Smithsonian Institution, has a photograph of an Indian woman 126 years old, and once, when he visited her, he saw her put six watermelons in a blanket, tie it up, and carry it on her back for two miles. Dr. P. C. Remondino has a photograph of another old Indian, who lived at the San Tomas Mission, in Lower California, and who was 140 years of age. Although blind, he daily gathered driftwood along the creeks. The list might be carried on indefinitely, and there are undoubtedly many natives extremely old, who do not know their ages.

Goodier to be taken up to breakfast, one of his men entered. As soon as he espled the colonel, he said sheepishly to the proprietor, "Do you keep tobacco here?".

"I have some of the long green and make their homes whose age brings

"D—n it! It was whisky I wanted."
As the three men stalked up the middle of the village street to the doctor's home, Grant said, "That is the most unruly spirit in my regiment. I fear a cannonball is the only kind of discipline that will ever bring him into subjection." was the only reply the Union officer vouchsafed.

Disheartened and indignant, the man went into his house, where he might rail unheard, but before he had finished his imprecations Grant's adjutant knocked at the door. 'Here is the price of your lumber,' he said, das he held out a handful of coins. Thier foot fine of the price of your lumber,' he said, das he held out a handful of coins. The foot fine of the price of your lumber, he said, das he held out a handful of coins. The foot fine of the price of the discipline that will ever bring him into subjection."

Great was the excitement in Dr. Goodler's little household at the prospect of having a Federal officer to breakfast, and it was perhaps well for Grant that his full glory had not yet shone forth, or it is questionable whether he would have had any breakfast at all that morning.

While Mrs. Goodier fried the chicken and her spouse set the table on the back porch, Grant discussed the situation with his adjutant. However, their conference was somewhat interfered with by the crying of the younger James Goodier, who was then an infant some three months old, and was enduring a slege of colic. At length Grant went over to the crib, and, taking the baby in his arms, walked up and down the room with him, singing and whisting till the little fellow quite forgot his pain and fell fast asleep in the arms of the man who was to become America's greatest military leader.

pain and fell last asiesp in the arms of the man who was to become America's greatest military leader.

When breakfast was over the doctor started with his guests to the camp. In his civilian clothes, Grant doubtless attracted less attention than did his uniformed adjutant. On the way they were joined by a group of citizens to whom an invitation was extended to come down and visit the camp. Among the number were two Florida belles, Lucy Young and Eliza Damerel. "Here are a couple of little rebels, colonel," said Dr. Goodier, playfully. "Don't you think you ought to arrest them?"

"I don't know but that is a good suggestion," Grant replied. "I am very fond of ladies' society and I miss their refining influence in the camp. Don't you think, girls, that I ought to make you my prisoners?"

"You haven't power enough in your whole Union army to arrest me," retorted Miss Eliza. "If you like to be with ladies, go back to your wife and enjoy her society. I am sure we can get along without you here."

Grant watched the snap of her black eyes with a smile of admiration, and when they reached camp, conducted his guests from one object of interest to another, explaining the working of the artillery and the details of the drill, while the band, at his orders, played Dixie's sweet strains.

That afternoon the regiment marched back to the North Fork and resumed its guard duty at the blockhouse, and there in the tame occupation of guarding a body of bridge-builders, the man of whom Lincoln said, "Wherever Grant is, things move," found his first service in the civil war.

of all cases of consumption, in all its earlier stages, are cured by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, even after the disease has progressed so far as to induce repeated bleedings from the lungs, severe lingering cough with copious expectoration (including tubercular matter), great loss of flesh and extreme emaciation and weakness.

Do you doubt that hundreds of such cases reported te us as cured by "Golden Medical Discovery" were genuine cases of that dread and fatal disease? You need not take our word for it. They have, in nearly every instance, been so pronounced by the best and most experienced home physicians, whe have no interest whatever in misrepresenting them, and who were often strongly prejudiced and advised against a trial of "Golden Medical Discovery," but who have been forced to confess that it surpasses, in curative power over this fatal malady, all other medicines with which they are acquainted. Nasty codliver oil and its filthy "emulsions" and mixtures, had been tried in nearly all these cases and had either utterly failed to benefit, or had only seemed to benefit a little for a short time. Extract of malt, whiskey, and various preparations of the hypophosphites had also been faithfully tried in vain.

The photographs of a large number of those cured of consumption, bronchitis, lingering coughs, asthma, chronic nasal catarrh and kindred maladies, have been skillfully reproduced in a book of 160 pages which will be mailed to you, on receipt of address and six cents in stamps. You can then write those cured and learn their experience.

However, there was work enough to keep Col. Grant in the State. While Col. Smith's men were "holed up" in the seminary building, a party of bush-whackers had burned the railroad bridge over the North Fork of Salt River to prevent the transporting of troops from the west, and to this point Grant, with the Twenty-first Illinois Infantry, was ordered. Some years before the breaking out of hostilities the place was owned by a man who had mortally offended a chief of the Creek Indians, and against him and his family the tribe declared vengeance. It was to get beyond reach of the savages that the offender came to live in this lonely dwelling on the confine of a swamp wilderness strangely

In the first moment of wild alarm, every person made a quick dash for some avenue of escape from the most terrible danger that can be imagined. Scattering in every direction, men, women and children ran, without knowing which way to go. Some of the men snatched up arms; but there was little opportunity for resistance. One after another fell and was scalped.

FOR IN THE RIVER FLOE. Story of Saint Patrick and

A little girl, 9 years old, named Alice Foscue, was one of the guests at breakfast. She was a bright, ac-tive child, and when she heard the After Foscue, was one of the guests at breakfast. She was a bright, active child, and when she heard the savages yelling, and some one near her said, "Indians!" she sprang from her chair and darted out of the house, like a flying bird, through a back door which opened upon a small vegetable garden. Across this garden and over a low fence she went and found herself on the bank of a sluggish streamlet flowing through a low thicket-covered piece of ground. She was too young to reason clearly; but, frightened almost to death as she was, the fine, strong nature of our American girls of those stirring days, gave her the nerve to act promptly and well. She had just reached a winding cattle path by the stream's side, when a tall, grimy Indian man, scowling atrociously, came up face to face with her. She screamed at the top of her volce. The savage sprang toward her, flourishing a long knife. He limped as he moved, for he hal a wound in the leg; but she did not notice this. With her little heart almost stifled, expecting every moment to feel the knife blade strike her, she turned and darted into the thicket, waded the stream and ran up the opposite bank among the bushes. She heard the Indian follow, splashing the water and grunting savagely.

Mean time, Mark heard the firing of guns and the tumultuous volces at the distant house. He listened for a moment, then ran as fast as he could in the direction of the noise. It was a very foolish thing for him to do; he was running right into the Jaws of death; but he did not think of himself. When he had come near the house, however, and got a glimpse of what was going on, his blood ran cold in his veins. He saw the furious Indians butchering men, women and o' Good Fortune?" asked Meehaul, the gray-haired Sheannachie, of the boy, Terry, as they sat together by the river

Terry had been looking through his long glibbe of red hair at the swift wa-ters of the Floe, and wondering in his odd way why it was that those waters looked, from the distant hills, so bright and silvern, while, when seen near at hand, they seemed but dark and dun. He glanced up at the old man's words, and answered the question-Irish fash-

and answered the question—Irish fashion—by propounding another:

"What is the story of the salmon about, Meehaul?" he said.

The Sheannachie filled his short, black pipe, his invariable custom when about to tell one of his inexhaustible stock of legends. No doubt he believed that the pipe (he called it "Nelleen

Dhu," after the Ballycarney custom of giving names to all such personal pos-sessions,) contained some subtle skill in story-telling. THE STORY.

"Well, avick," he commenced, "the Salmon of Good Fortune is by long odds the most remarkable fish that swims the wather. His histhory goes back all the way to St. Pathrick him-back all the way to St. Pathrick himself."

"Is he as ould as that?" queried Terry Gaffagan.

"Yerragh, child, will ye let me tell mv own story in my own way? Ye'll hear all about him by an' by. I wish yerself was ould enough to smoke a pipe, for 'tis a grand thing entirely, is a pipe, for keepin' a man from axin' tells that when St. Patrick was afther makin' a Christian out o' the O'Cafney of those days the chieftain treated him to a taste of the salmon caught in this same River Fear that ye're this minute dabbin' yer feet in. The saint was mightity pleased with the fish—as, indeed, he ought to be, for there's no finer salmon in Ireland that the salmon of salmon in Ireland that the salmon of the Fear. So up he goes till be comes to the well of Glenfear, in the mountains, an' there, where the river takes its rise, he solemnly blesses the fish an' the wathers they swim in."

its rise, he solemnly blesses the fish an' the wathers they swim in."

"Sure, I've been to that well o' Glenfear," put in Terry. "Tis a quare little spring, way up in the mountains, so small ye'd never think it was where the river rose from. There's a hazel tree hangin' over it, I'm thinkin."

"A hazel tree! Tis yerself that's tel in' true, achorra; an' that hazel tree has a powerful deal to do with this story. Ye see, Terry, St. Patrick wanted to do somethin' out o' the common to show what he thought o' the O'carney's hospitality, and the grand salmon o' the River Fear, so he made a prophecy."

WHAT ST. PATRICK SAID. "A prophecy, Michael?"
"Aye, a prophecy; an' ye know when

Terry looked interested. "Ye don't say so!" he exclaimed. "Begorrah, 'tis myself that would like to catch that salmon." WHICH TERRY GAFFAGAN FISHED

Just then round a bend in the river a man hove in sight. It was Shamus Dhu, otherwise Black James, poacher-in-chief of the Barony of Thieveanny, and he was engaed in fishing with rod, line and gaff. The water at that point was strictly preserved, and all the fish belonged by law to the American gentleman, Mr. Perkins, who had leased the ancient demeane of Castle Carney. But Shamus Dhu cared little for the law, and less for Mr. Perkins's rights, and expected to land one or more salmon in defiance of both before evening.

Terry Gaffagan watched him coming nearer and nearer, with a big temptation tugging at his heart-strings. He longed for a few casts of that powerful line, just to see if he could not catch the Salmon of Good Fortune—that harbinger of tuck. Opinions on the law-lessness of poaching are very vague in Ballycarney; indeed, many held that it was no sin to spear a salmon or two it was no sin to spear a salmon or two in preserved waters at any time. But lessness of poaching are very vague in Ballycarney; indeed, many held that it was no sin to spear a salmon or two in preserved waters at any time. But Terry, was bound to Mr. Perkins by many little kindnesses, and hardly liked to poach on his waters.

Shamus Dhu was evidently looking for a good place for a cast. He came toward them at a round pace, and presently began fishing once more a few yards from Terry. The boy had risen and was watching the sport with the utmost excitement. What if Shamus Dhu should land the lucky salmon before his very eyes? The thought was not to be endured!

"Shamus, darlint," cried the boy, pleadingly, "give me just one cast—just one, Shamus!"

The poacher turned with a surly grin, and held out rod and gaff to Terry. "You can take 'em for a while," he growled, "if ould Meehaul will lend me his pipe for a shaugh or two. "Tis dyn' I am fer a smoke."

A look of entreaty from Terry induced Meehaul to hand over his short clay—his treasured 'nelleen'—to the poacher. Then the youngster, who was indeed a practiced fisher already, began to whip the stream. Meehaul and Shamus Dhu conversed at first, but Terry paid no attention to what they said. His soul was intent upon the work before him, and he held the gaff poised in hand ready to pierce any salmon which should take his bait.

Some may fish for a week and catch nought; others often land in the first few minutes. On this occasion, at least, Terry belonged to the latter category. In a delightfully quick space of time there came a straightening of the line, followed by that tug at the rod which (if it does not denote a sunken tree) tells of a finny prize. Such a big tug, too! Only a salmon (or a sunken tree) tells of a finny prize. Such a big tug, too! Only a salmon (or a sunken tree) tells of a finny prize. Such a big tug, it was a fierce battle between the boy and the salmon (for a salmon, and a many-pounder salmon the biter proved to be.) Terry leaped boldly from the haul, the sheannachie, taking up the tale, related how Shamus had come up by accident just as he had been recounting a legend to the boy. "Sure, I'm thinkin' it was the legend that did it ali," he continued. "Terry there wanted to ketch the Salmon o' Good Fortune."

Terry looked interested. "Ye don't say so!" he exclaimed. "Begorrah, 'tis myself that would like to catch that salmon."

"He only comes once in a hundred years," sagely commented Meehaul.

"Wirra! Wirra! But that's mighty hard. An' how long is it since the last Salmon o' Good Fortune was caught?"

"Deed an' I can't tell ye," quoth the sheannachle, "they say that the great Brian Boru, him that beat the Danes at Clontarf, was one o' them that caught the lucky fish."

Terry sighed, and looked at the swift brown current, wherein, even now, a Salmon of Good Fortune might be swimning by. Very little happiness had there been in his life. Up in the wretched mountain hovel where his grandfather lived, the fare was scant and uninviting. If only the fortunate salmon could be captured and slain how different all might be!

A CHANCE AT THAT SALMON.

PET TARANTULAS.

Big and Clever Spiders Who Carry Deadly Poison in Their Feet. (CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.) BY ANNIE RUSSELL.

"The tarantulas pine in confinement," 'refuse to spin or to eat, and seldom live long. A centipede or a scorpion, on the other hand, deliberately commits suicide when it sees no chance of getting free.

"Commit suicide?" I asked. "Why?
How?"

"By inoculating their bodies with their own poison. I have seen them do it time and time again. The centipede carries poison in two little teeth beside

On the approach of danger Browney retired into his fortress and pulled to the door. The appearance of the close house was identical with the surrounding earth so that it escaped detection.

"How do centipedes live?"

"They hide in rotten logs, sobbed with decomposition. Often they are found concealed under boards or trees like other worms. They exercise no ingenuity to protect their houses as do the tarantulas.

BUSY INSECTS.

BUSY INSECTS. "Then, too, the tarantulas are indus-trious and have an object in life. They are always spinning and 'traveling about investigating the country. They spin long reels of web and by means of it let themselves down over the sides of steep bluffs and into caverns where they are likely to find insects for provender."

"How many tarantulas have you had at once?"

"How many tarantulas have you had at once?"

"As many as twenty."

"And how did you catch them?"

"Oh, by hanging around watching them day after day until I learned their habits. Then when I found what they prized most I offered it to them, and finally, after they became accustomed to my presence I would put something they liked on a flat piece of pasteboard and watch them crawl on the board to get it."

"Something they get from the grass in their native clime. No one has found out exactly what."

"Do you see that bald spot on Browney's back?" pointing to a place about as big as a small wafer from which the fuzzy hair was rubbed, and which looked much like the bald spot on a man's cranium. "That rubbed spot comes from continuous spinning."

"Spin, Browney!"

The master lifted one back leg suggestively, and in an instant Browney had put up both hindmost legs and was spinning away on his well-rubbed ball much more intelligent than their cousins, the centipedes." TARANTULAR INTELLIGENCE.

"Do I? Well! I'll show you. Look here, Browney!"

The little slide down to Browney's hatch was pulled back and the fuzzy, round-bodied king of spiders crawled of fur with all his might. "Those two stiff little knobs on pegs on the extremity of his back are the bobbins on which he winds his thread.

"When he was free and very busy one day I watched him unwind yards and yards of spun thread and float down on a veritable ladder of it to a crannie half-way down the rocky surface of a steep bluff. There he captured a juicy beetle. He drags his prey after him by folding it in his threads and hitching it to those pegs on his back. His eyes are in the top of his head."

"But tarantulas are deadly polson?"

"Yes: but they use their posion as a defense. They have enemies to guard against, just as other creatures. Their poison is carried in a little sack in the last section of each foot, and in the little sharp claw at the extremity that is also hollow. They also have two teeth that are venomous.

"I have observed that they tend their young until they are four weeks old, After that they deliberately run away if from them and leave them to look after themselves. This plan teaches them self-reliance.

"There are thirty varieties of tarantulas. The jet-black ones are very handsome, with trimmings of white to set them off. Then there are almost blood-red ones, with various shades and markings."

MUTUAL SCHOOLMASTERS

HOW TWO POOR BOYS LEARNED

Pair of Brothers Who Taught Each Other and Did not Hesitate to Apply the Hickory When the Occasion Seemed to Demand It.

(CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.) BY RICHARD MALCOLM JOHNSTON

Among my acquaintances at the Bar many years back was one who, not long after middle age, having attained con-siderable fame and satisfactory fortune, had retired from practice, and settled upon a farm a few miles out of the ounty-seat.

One day, while he and I were together in my office, he gave me a bit of his own experience that interested me considerably. I will put it down (as near as I can recall them) in his own words.

We had been conversing about difficulties often attendant upon the beginnings of young professional men. To some remark of mine he answered rather abruptly: "Now, now! People may talk and talk about opportunities which they think they ought to have had, and what great things they might have done if these had not been unjustly withheld from hem. In a country like this almost any young man can find as much of oppor-

young man can find as much of opportunity as he needs to start with. I'll tell something, if you'll listen, about me and my brother Dave.

"We agreed that we'd have an education better than could be got at the neighboring country school, beyond which our parents' means could not allow us fo go. Dave was then 16 years old and I 14. We got the notion somehow that to be ripe scholars we must know Latin, with which our late teacher had no acquaintance.

"One day, after we had been for some time speculating upon the subject, Dave know Latin, with which our late teacher had no acquaintance.

"One day, after we had been for some time speculating upon the subject, Dave said: 'Dan, my sakes! Why cank' we teach ourselves. You me, and I you? I believe we can do it if we'll begin right, study hard, make good rules and stick to 'em. Now you may not believe it, but that very notion had been gradually forming in my mind.

"So with our own little money we bought one Adams's Latin grammar and one Historiae Sacrae, and in what holidays we got from work on the farm we kept school and went to school in a fodder-house just behind the horse lot. At the other school during the seasons father could afford to send us, we had picked up a good deal of arithmetic and English grammar, and it surprised and delighted us that, principles of syntax being much alike in both, we found our task less difficult than we had apprehended.

"When mother found what we were doing (for we had not told her until fairly started.) she besought father to increase our holidays. At first he refused, saying it was mere nonsense, Dave's and my attempting to teach each other what neither of us knew one single blessed thing about. Yet, yielding to her affectionate persistence, he assented, saying that, although the work on the farm (always the case) was pressing, he would give us, besides Saturday, that we'd been having, Tuesday and half of Thursday. That is, for a while, to see if anything was to come of it. If not, the thing had to stop, at least so far as extra holidays were concerned.

"We agreed, Dave and I, that the discipline was to be as strict as that in other schools, which you and I know was altogether of another sort from the lax, persuasive, cajoling in these days. We were to give and take genuine, good, long lessons, and then get them. If we didn't we were to get them over again, not omitting advancing tasks, and say and be made to say them to final entire satisfaction."

"Well," I said during a pause in the

tion."
"Well," I said during a pause in the history, "such as that must have been rather a tough trial upon brotherly affection, if you and Dave had very much of that article. Didn't you quarrel

BY L. E. CRITTENDEN.

Billy sprained his ankle quite severely just before Christmas, and the next day after this mishap Ellen, the servant, who had been with them so many years, was called home by her mother's illness.

It greatly distressed Billy to think his mother had so much to do, and that he could not help her.

"Now, if I had been a girl very likely I wouldn't have sprained my ankle, and then I could have helped you lots, said he.

"But how could I get on without you, Billy," said his mother. "No, I do not mind it; though I get a little tired standing on my feet so much, and I am so tall that I have to stoop a good deal, and that tires my back."

"Yes, and it makes yourfingers rough to have them in hot water, you know it does," said Billy.

"Yes, at stops the Christmas embroidery, for my fingers catch in the silks so. I would buy a paid of rubber gloves, but they are rather expensive, and I hope Ellen will be back before long."

Billy fell to studying over these things, and by and by he took up his crutches and went into his workroom to see what he could find there to help him out.

Almost instantly his eyes fell on an old-fashloned plane, stool with a screw op to lower or raise it at pleasure.

"Good," said Billy. "You are just the ticket for dish-washing, and things of that sort, and now for the gloves."

In the corner he came across a lightweight gossamer cloak that his mother had discarded, and out of which he had intended to fashlon a rubber bath-blanket, as he was greatly given to splashing.

"You're all right, too" he remarked, in a tone of great satisfaction, as he disched and the corner has be a singer to the student of the stu

"That is a remarkable history," I exclaimed with heartiest emphasis.
"What became of your brother?"

"He studied medicine, and is, and for years has been considered, one of the best physicians in the town where he first setled. Oh, no; there' nothing very remarkable about it. Many a poor boy, with scantier means, but with superior gifts, has done far better than Dave and I. It only tends to show what can be done by a youth of slim means and moderate understanding by searching for and making for himself opportunities instead of mouthing complaints against fortune for not bestowing them gratuitously."

TERRY CATCHING THE SALMON OF GOOD FORTUNE

St. Patrick made a prophecy it always came true. He forefold that once every hundred years the hazel tree that hangs over the well o' Glenfear should bear, among its other fruit, one nut-only one in all a hundred years, mind ye—that should be the hazelnut o' Good Fortune. Few people go to pick nuts from the tree over Glenfear well, avick, so the prophecy told that every hundred years the hazelnut of Good Fortune should drop off the tree, bein' past ripeness, an' fall into the well below. Then the waters from that well were to carry that nut down the mountain side, till they grew from a teeny hill torrent into a stream, an' flown' through valley, widened out into the River Fear. All the way with these waters the hazelnut of Good Fortune was to go until the Salmon o' Good Fortune snapped it up an' swallowed it.

"Now, 'tis you that know well, Terry St. Patrick made a prophecy it always boy and the salmon lay side by side

"Now, 'tis you that know well, Terry Gaffagan, that in the close season the salmon go up to the head-waters of the Fear to lay their eggs, an' then come down again with the current, Just about this time o' the year."

Terry nodded his head sagely. The habits of the Fear salmon were only too well known to him.

"Well, then, it was willed in the prophecy that one o' these salmon should swallow the hazelnut, an' in that way become the Salmon o' Good Fortune. Remember, it was only to hap-

"Poaching, eh?" said a severe voice. Terry Gaffagan leaped up with a wild start, to find himself face to face with Mr. Perkins himself, the owner by law of those waters.

Shamus Dhu was nowhere to be seen (having run off at first sight of the American,) while old Meehaul, with a very downcast face, leaned on his stick in the background.

At first the "bold fisherman" felt inclined to cut and run for it, but there was a twinkle in Mr. Perkins's eye which hinted that the anger expressed by his voice and tone might not have been deep. Accordingly Terry shook his dripping garments, and, with a comical grin, remarked rather tremulously: "That's right, Misther Perkins, Ye can take the fish, though. I was only fishin' for the fun of it, an' I forgot all about the poachin."

LUCK AFTER ALL.

The American smiled. "Keep the salmon, Terry," he said. "You deserve it for the fine fight you made. Besides I saw the real 'nigger in the woodsyonder. But tell me, though, how is it that you go a-fishing with such people as Shamus Dhu?"

Terry grinned once more, and Mee-

"Here's a piece of pear for you, Browney," said the master.
"Does he like pears?"
"Only the juice. He sucks the juice of raw beef occasionally, too, but he vastly prefers a good fat grasshopper if he can get him."
Browney examined the piece of pear critically, with his feelers, and pressed it as if to extract the juice, but he did not seem hungry. The master of them took up the star-shaped creature in his fingers and felt separately every one of the fatal little legs.
"You see, he is not hostile to me. Now let my brother attempt to play with him."

A curly-headed young man of twenty or thereabouts drew near and called to the tarantula coaxingly.

"I don't know why it is so," laughed the master, "but none of my tarantulas like Charles. He has coaxed and bribed them and hunted for tit bits for them all in vain; he has to attend to them in my absence by aid of a stick."

On the paim of his extended hand was a fat lump of what looked to be spider web and grains of sand, all matted together inextricably. "That is the front door of Browney's house. I found him out in Arizona."

"How did he have his house built?"

"It was just a hole in the ground deep enough to hold him, and right next to another hole that belonged to his mate. Afterward I found that a little subterranean passage connected the two. This lump made of mud or sod ket, as he was greatly given to splashing.

"You're all right, too," he remarked, in a tone of great satisfaction, as he fished out this garment.

Then he went up-stairs to draw his mother's hand. He found her resting, so he brought his drawing-block over to her chair, and had her place her, hand on it, and then he drew the out-line.

to her chair, and had her place her hand on it, and then he drew the outline.

Billy often did this. It amused him to draw his mother's slender hand and his own chubby one below it, and write beneath them, "Billy's mother's hand, and Mother's Billy's paw."

This outline Billy took down-stairs and traced it with white crayon four times on the gossamer, with a liberal allowance for seams, then he cut the parts out.

Billy's accomplishments stopped short of sewing, and he was looking at the parts, wishing he could glue or nail them together, when Sam came in.

"Oh, hullo, Sam," cried Billy. "Till give you that monkey-wrench you wanted if you'll get your big sister to stitch these things together on the machine."

In the latter part of June, 1836, he was in the edge of the Chickasawachee swamp looking for young squirrels, which were considered a great table delicacy, as well as excellent targets for rifle practice, in the season when deer were not in good condition. It was yet early morning; the sun had just flashed above the gloomy, mosshung forest in the east when Mark reached the place where he expected to find game. He had risen before Mr. Couper's family was awake; but the servants in the ample kitchen were preparing a generous breakfast, and some neighbors were to join in the meal.

children. Even the negro servants were mercilessly stricken down, old and the Indians found that his hiding-place had been discovered, and, well knowing that if he stayed there he and his family would sooner or later be murdered, he sold the house and plantation to a gentleman by the name of Couper, who, with his wife and children and a nephew of his wife's, a boy of fifteen, named Mark Spears, toole possession and began forthwith to make it a most attractive and hospitable home.

Meantime, the Creek war came on, and the savages began their bloody work wherever opportunity offered. The whole of Southern Georgia was startled by deeds of the most outrageous cruelty. Families were butchered, women and children scalped and otherwise horribly mutilated, and evrywhere in the path of the Indiansfire and blood were the recording elements of scenes too heart-rending for description.

A GLIMPSE OF COURAGE. Mark stood for one awful momen Mark stood for one awful moment gazing. It was a sight never to be forgotten. Quickly enough he realized that his friends were probably all doomed to death, and that his own safety depended upon instant and energetic flight. those who were so rapidly falling before the brutal assaults of the savages, and so, with a sickening sensation in his breast, and with limbs trembling under him, he turned at the wood's edge and started to run back the way he had come.

When he reached the little runlet and was wading through it, he heard a cry, keen, clear, agonizing. It was the voice of a child. Then he heard a deep, gutteral muttering, and the sound of some one dashing across the water. Again the cry. He knew the little girl's voice, and the whole truth of the situation flashed into his mind, as he caught a glimpse of a gay little dress fluttering and flitting between scrubby trees not far away, and saw a stalwart savage following at a limping, but rapid gait. He knew that it was Alke Foscue and that she was running for her life. Blood tells; the boy had come of revolutionary stock; courage was his birthright. The little girl's awful stress of danger roused all the fighting strength of his nature. He could not save himself and let that hideous Indian glant scap the helpless child. Almost in the twinkling of an eye pursued and pursuer were out of sight, but Mark nerved himself desperately and ran as fast as he could after them, setting the hair triggers of his gun and cocking it as he ran.

triggers of his gun and cocking it as he ran.

He had not gone more than forty yards when, emerging into a small open space in the woods, he saw Alice running round and round, almost in a circle, and the limping savage pressing close behind her, now and then making a grab at her flowing brown hair. Mark stopped short and leveled his rifle; but when he pressed the trigger the lock snapped; the flint failed to make fire. Fortunately the Indian was too intent upon seizing Alice to discover Mark, who instantly reset the hair trigger, and again cocked and leveled his gun. Alice's strength was fast failing, and her pursuer, despite his lame leg, was apparently increasing his speed. The little girl's only chance of evading him was by changing her course suddenly and often, this way and that.

Again the flint failed to send its spark into the priming. It was too blunt; its edge needed chipping or "picking," as the word for it was; and now Mark had to be quick and cool, into his pouch went his hand, out came his hunting-knife with the blade of which he struck the flint five or six sharp whacks. Then he carefully reprimed the pan.

GALLOPING DICK. Being Chapters From the Life and Fortunes of Bich-ard Ryder, Otherwise Galloping Dick, Sometime Gentleman of the Road. By H. B. Marriott Watson. (Chicago: Stone & Kimball.

To the reader fond of tales of outlawry and daring, and the dash and methods of the bold highwayman, this volume, so full of stirring incident, of bold tricks of speech and action, will be of excit-ing interest. Galloping Dick is sup-posed to be telling his own story, and the frank and boastful way in which the dashing highwayman. There is also a certain atmosphere of chivalry about him, even while he pursues his calling, that more than half enlists the admira-tion, and one can but feel what a splendid fellow he would be if the spice of lawlessness were eliminated from his nature. In just this lies the evil influence of such tales upon the mind of the young reader. The villain is really an attractive fellow, and when ed can be exceedingly compan-e. You are amused by his ready wit and pleased with the promptness with which he will own himself ousted, and the boy upon the verge of manhood, who is fond of adventure and full of courage, is strongly inclined to feel that he would enjoy being thrown for a time into such company to sit with time into such company, to sit with him, as did the bishop, at table and measure his wit with that of the outlaw. The situations depicted have nothing of tameness in them, but are full of life and action.

The course of one of these drove him to a deed, after which he had only the choice of flight or instant deaht; and, with the approval, indeed, with the expressed desire of his fellows, he left Russia for England. Here he began his career as a publicist. "Underground Russia" was followed by "The Russian Peasantry." He was full of fresh plans at the moment of his untimely death—a death which deprives the world of a man within his limits supremely sincere, who was ready, in the cause of what he conceived as right, to spare no nerve or energy. It is probable that his funeral will be made the occasion of something in the nature of a Russian demonstration.

originally published in Scribner's and issued soon after in book-form as "The House Beautiful," have had more to do with awakening the sense of beauty in many an American household than any other single cause. Mr. Cook may be said to have been for us the apostle of the English art movement—in so far as it has dealt with the minor arts; but his taste is largely his own, and cannot be said to reflect that of any particular English artist or artist-mechanic. What once seemed odd or extravagant in the designs which he illustrates and recommends is now, for the most part, seen to be moderate and rational as well as picturesque or beautiful. The cuts after Mr. Lathrop's drawings of old English silver, colonial furniture, Japtrap and Italian mirrors have set a fashion which happily persists, and are now as fresh and useful as on their creation's day. We heartlly welcome this new and cheaper edition of the book.

(Harper's Weekly:) Good pay has at least this much to do with produc-ing good literature. It keeps men at ing good literature. It keeps men at work at the business of writing who would not work at that business unless they could make a fairly good living out of it. It takes able men and womes to make good literature, and people of ability won't work any cheaper than they can conveniently help. They are just as appreciative of the convenience of having money as other people are. They like to spend it, to give it away, and some of them even presume to want some to lay by. True, it is demand and supply rather than intrinsic merit that settles the price of manuscript, but Mr. Bok must be a bold man if he hopes to demonstrate that less pay would bring better "copy."

(St. Thomas, Ont., Evening Journal:)
There is no Englishman who so thoroughly represents, in his writing, the imperial instinct of the British race as Rudyard Kipling. He has seen England and Greater England, and he sings the song of the men who have gone forth from the one to create the other as no other poet has sung it. He has an abiding faith in the strength, the virility, the endurance, of the Anglo-Saxon race, and in the nobility of its mission on earth. Writing at the time of the great Chicago on the chaotic condition of the people of the United States, he held that the great republic would yet be saved by the Anglo-Saxon germ within it. In the pride of his race, his vibrant note of imperialism, Kipling may be placed side by side with Tennyson, and if the duties of a Poet Laurate are to sing the nation's songs. as Tennyson sang them, when war threatens, when heroes die, when royal couples mate, and when sovereigns are crowned, then the versatile Kipling, whose natural force is not abated by reason of his versatility, would be no mean successor to the great man from whose brow the laurel so lately fell. There is no Englishman who so thor-make complete and representative, might be kept together, and his family would be glad if this could be done. In the absence of any contract for the purchase of the library as a whole, or of the part mentioned above, it will be necessary on January 1 to publish the catalogue, with a view to sale by auction; but as the volumes referred to are of cosmopolitan origin, and practically combine the chief literary souces of biblical criticism, it is probable they will find a place in some public or private library.

Dean Hole's book, just out, giving his impressions of this country, contains some curious statements. He says, for instance, that in prohibition towns liquor is generally dispensed in teapors, and tells about a guest in a hotel, who, upon calling for something to drink, was told by the landloard: "You will find a little tap near the dressing table in your room, which will put you in communication with the old rye, and you can take what you please for yourself and, your friends, as there is a meter on the other side of the wal!," It cannot be supposed that this was a personal experience of the dean, and it looks, therefore, as if some wag had been "stuffing" him.

Small vices are greatly on the in crease among women. At least the tall girl, with skates on her arm, said so, either, but downright bad habits. "Just notice around among your friends," she went on, "and perhaps its the exyou'll find that seven at least out of every ten women encouraging them-selves in some peculiar and injuriously

"It began a few years ago, innocently enough, in the first use of tobacco. Lots of us thought it piquant and pretty to puff smoke rings from a little Turkish cigarette, and now, nothing is more astonishing observe than the numbers of girls, right in their debutante season, and matrons, with many other delightful occupations and fancies to busy lips and fingers, who are confirmed cigarette fiends.

The little roll of tobacco, no bigger than an oat straw, has given place to what is vastly more injurious than what is vastly more injurious than the biting Virginia weed men smoke. the big opium-tinctured oriental cigarette. The gentle smokers allow themselves six and eight of these a day, enjoying the soothing sensation they impart and deeply inhaling every mouthful they draw. The extent to which the habit has grown did not impress me until my manicure mentioned how many of her patrons once a week came to have the inside points of the thumb and index fingers bleached from nicotine stains.

STRAIN ON THE NERVES.

STRAIN ON THE NERVES. Now the worst phase of the cigarette Now the worst phase of the cigarette habit is that the insidious tobacco is not of so much injury to women's lungs as it is to the nerves. This is an entirely different effect from that preduced on the masculine system.

Men don't feel the nervous shock because they lead more active lives than their sisters, but it was the calm explanation of a little person I found collapsed and trembling among her divan pillows, that, she guessed she had been smoking too hard. Any one would have agreed with her at the sight of her pallid cheeks and over-bright eyes set in ominously dark rings. Nevertheless she insisted in spite of her doctor's admonitions that nervous prostration in its worst form might overtake her, she needed and would continue to delight in the exhilaration her cigarettes supplied.

The desire for mental stimulus, for excitement that prompts women into these curious extravagances, and the surest victims are those whose mentality is well above the ordinary.

Next after the cigarette habit the inordinate tea drinking induiged in is enough to make one shudder for the nerves and digestive appliances of the future generation. There really doesn't appear to be a more harmless taste, and it's all right enough until it grows into a dissipation. Then it is far more insidious than regular beer-drinking, and a dissipation. Then it is far more insidious than regular beer-drinking, and as ultimately destructive as whisky.

Any physician will agree that between tea and coffee, the former contains the most deleterious elements, but no woman ever stops to consider the results that must arrive from pouring six cups of this deadly stringent in one afternoon down that most sensitive piece of human mechanism, the alimentary canal. She takes six cups incidentally on her calling rounds, and at her breakfast and luncheon helps herself to more of so powerful a beverage.

These genuine hard drinkers require These genuine hard drinkers require their tea stronger and more frequently as time goes on. On the brain, tea has an effect that is inspiring, it soothes and relaxes the muscles, but withers the digestive organs. From tea-drinking to tea-eating is a step too frequently made now among women to excite surprise. Handsful of dry leaves are munched with as much relish as though they were salted almonds, and with an effect on the complexion and liver very like that of morphine.

eration in tastes seems to be disregarded. Haven't you noticed the numbers of women who keep their little bonbonieres full of soda mint tablets or potash pellets, enjoying them as though they were bonbons?

ion for pallid cheeks induced a few ab-surd creatures to cat raw barley, wheat or oats, in hopes of an unwhoissome flesh coloring. Ever so many otherwise sane American women have tried it and from a trial have fallen into the shocking habit of eating cupsful of these raw cereals, husks and all, that hitherto we thought only ponderous millstones could THE USE OF PERFUMES.

But the barley-eaters are no whit have an end-of-the-century craze for perfumes. Drinking cologne, a few drops at a time on a lump of sugar, is the mildest form of this, vice. Over in Parls some reprehensible perfumers showed their dissipated patrons how weet odors could be introduced under he skin with a hypodermic syringe, and see the practice appearing on this side

Of course all the results of these fan-tastic notions are easy to see, for at in-tervals, and never more surely than this winter, has nervous prostration threatened to become epidemic in the feminine ranks. It is partly the fashion and partly a revelation of the actual truth for eight or more women to gather at any time around a luncheon table and complain that they are just up from beds of discomfort and divans of exhaustion. There is a remedy for this evil, growing as it is, for you will find that the most inveterate cigarette smokers will often give up their cigarettes for the sake of their wheel. Somehow tobacco and bicycles do not work well together, and between the two the wheel usually wins the day. I know of many hardened tea-soakers who have gone on a correcting milk diet since they fell victims to the golf craze, and it's no use' to skate on a stomach nourished on raw wheat. It's the increasing indulgence in outdoor exercise that is going to give women a chance to pull out of their bad habits and drop morbid eccentricities for oxygen and hearty exercise.

SMART WOMEN IN THE OPERA AND THEATER,

Young Matrons of New York So ciety, are Setting the Example of Severe Simplicity.

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.) (CORRESPONDENCE OF THE INSES)

NEW YORK, Jan. 1. 1896.—A visit to the opera in these days of gorgeous stuffs and showy trimmings reveals so much splendor that anything like a plain gown in one of the smart boxes.

is apt to attract attention from the mere force of contrast.

Such attention Mrs. John Jacob As-ter brought about a few nights ago, when in a dainty costume of pale green velvet, without a shred of trimming, ling considerably at the upper portion meeting them.

With this enchanting simplicity a white spray aigrette, fastened with a round diamond brooch, in the hair, was on this occasion Mrs. Astor's only ornament, if one may except the superbouquet of white carnations and roses. On another, however, with the same gown, a long brooch of diamonds and pearls, shaped into a true lover's knot, was added, with stunning effect to the front of the bodice.

FOR THE COIFFURE.

The hair ornament most in favor at the opera, and, indeed, for other evening occasions now, is the white osprey aigrette, with the jewel fastening mentioned, but a more gracious effect, even, is to have the fastening a pair of soft crush roses, in a gay or delicate

Sometimes the roses will be of white silk, and in the adjustment of the orna-ments these will be placed low at the left side of the coiffure, almost behind

If the wearer is a grand brunetie, with inky locks, the effect produced is delightfully Spanish. For blonde heads there are very pretty butterfly and bird wings in gold and sliver net, and young ladies are much given to simple bandeaux of white or pinksor blue satin ribbon, with an aigrette in the same tone, or else a perky bow at the side.

DERIITANTE FROCKS. DEBUTANTE FROCKS.

Opera gowns for the young ladies also run to simplicity, and the most charming ones seen consisted of a plain satin skirt and a tulle bodice, made in a round baby fashion. The color al-ways is cream white, or a pale tint, blue, pink or yellow, and small artifi-

Again, a tulle bodice for a young lady, whether in white or color, may have only a belt and neck garnishings of white satin ribbon, and, though simple, the look of this is always very elegant.

Velvet and satin gowns for those who are fond of much trimming have sometimes tulle and artificial flowers on the skirt, as well as bodice.

A dinner gown trimmed in this way, illustrated, appeared at the opera a few nights ago, and is of black velvet with a scarf decoration of scarlet tulle shadowed with black figures. This drapes the neck of the bodice and crosses the bust diagonally to the waist, a great scarlet chrysanthemum catching it in front and at each shoulder. The same flowers hold down

WHEN WEARING JEWELS.

If untrimmed, all the jeweled pins and brooches in possession are sometimes called into account, and are fastened close together in a glittering line across the bust. Pearl necklaces are also much seen, in three close rows with diamond barrettes, and again in a long single string that is wound twice around the throat, the lower loop, in some cases, falling almost to the waist. Another necklace recently seen at the opera was very charming, and on investigation proved, to be quite within the reach of modest folk.

This was a single string of tiny seed pearls, that fitted close to the throat, and from which hung at intervals of an inch a variety of unset stones. The stones were bored and strung through with a gold thread to hang pendant; a great, shapeless pearl forming the central drop. The other gems were colored and of a dozen kinds. This neck.

EVENING BODICES. Odd bodices are more than ever seen just now, and some of those sported at opera and theater are very beautiful. They are worn with silk, satin and velvet skirts, and the skirts need not necessarily be always black. For example, a magnificent skirt of dark-red velvet, recently worn in a theater box, has a little round body of pale pink chiffon with trimmings of lace and white satin ribbon.

A skirt in a rich black peau de sole was worn with a darling waist. This was also the baby shape so much affected nowadays, and that seems to carry with it always the suggestion of the round neck, was an the vertice used.

High waists of chiffon have sometimes the bodice portion covered with scattered lace designs or rows of insertion appliqued on. One enchanting one, worn lately to the theater, was appliqued all over, with big love-knots. The wearer was a blonde on the Titian order and she had gone to see Mile. Yvette Guilbert to good purpose, as nothing could have been more becoming to her type than this adorable bodice.

NEW OFFERING FOR WOMEN TO MAKE.

coloring of the church. The roof has somewhat the appearance of being thatched and moss-covored, and is surmounted by a gold cross. Within the gate are seats, a figure of Christ, a reading-desk upon which a Bible rests, and a drinking fountain, with appropriate texts here and there cut in the stone. The floor is of mosaic tiling. There is space, naturally to rest a coffin, the object for which a lich gate is designed, the word "lich" meaning a corpse. In Scotland one often hears the word "lichwake," meaning "the time or act of watching with the dead." When a coffin is taken from the hearse, if there is any delay in entering the church, it rests within the lich gate. This is also the case after leaving the church. The seats are intended for the pall-bearers.

In regard to other gifts received by the Church of the Transfiguration—the gate, by the way, cost $4000—about two years ago, at an early communion service, a check for $66,000 was given at the offertory by a lady of the parish. The money was spent to purchase the house adjoining the church on the east. It has been fitted up as a parish house with guild rooms, library and serving rooms, and has just been completed and blessed. It is a memorial of the daughter of the donor, who also gave a beautiful marble reredos, which was unveiled at the first service on Christmas day.

CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.

There is in the South American forests a flower, the night-blooming cereus — which, on a moonlight night, once a year, at the very crown of summer, suddenly opens a marvelous blossom, whiter than silver, more fragile than a dream.

Then all the forest is intoxicated with a perfumed breath that is sweeter than the spices of Paradise. For four or five short hours this wonderful flower hangs upon the vine in perfection, but with the first ray of light it droops and fades, and by the time the sun is up nothing remains of that miracle of the night bet a mass of flabby brown petals.

the Transfiguration—has been the recipient of a number of gifts during the last year and at Christmas.

Most conspicuous among the number is the lich gate, probably the only one of its kind in this country, certainly the only one in New York.

A lich gate is quite English, and as the Church of the Transfiguration, with its picturesque surroundings, always reminds one of a dear little English church, all it needed was a lich gate to complete the illusion.

The Rev. J. Houghton has been the rector of the church for nearly fotry years—in fact he built the church—and a lich gate has been a hobby with him for some time. On a recent visit to England he saw a gate that seemed a model one. Therefore, when one of his parishiners—one of the members of the Astor family, by the way—proposed making a memorial which should also be a Christmas gift to the church, the lich gate was proposed.

IN LATER LIFE. Love—even under these difficult cirof a Venezuelan marriage, for in a country where life is so simple and in-expensive, considerations of conveniences are not as imperative as in more sophisticated communities. As a rule too, the marriages are happy. The wo too, the marriages are happy. The women are generally amiable and, for the most part, excellent housekeepers. Love of their children is an absolute passion with both sexes and forms a very strong tie between the parents.

But only women of the strongest character can, in the prostrating heat, pursue any intellectual interests. As a rule, soon after marriage all the pretty accomplishments taught by the patient French nuns are abandoned, all exercise is omitted and the beautiful whiteskinned slender girl becomes fat, brown and indolent. cise, and without it in these tropical countries this lovely bloom of their first years is almost as evanescent as the life of the rarest flower.

It is entirely due to the climate that this is so, because in very many cases where the girl is able to bring a substantial dower, the parents arrange for her a marriage in Europe, and some of the most beautiful women of the continental capitals are Venezuelans, who retain their beauty well on into middle age. If, however, their fate is to return to Venezuela they have only to resign themselves to an early flight of all their physical attractions.

EARLY MATING. EARLY MATING.

As a rule—and this rule is almost without exception—they are married before they attain the age of twenty. Indeed, the greater number of marriages are contracted before the girl has passed the eighteenth birthday. The modes of courtship are very like those of old Spain.

It appears that the thirteen English angels in Augustus Harris's production of "Hansel and Gretel" are disgusted with their titled English manager and "the electric staircase" because the steps were too narrow. A loquacious member of this chorus says: "We shall never consent to tour America again. There is too much ice water and too little politeness. We are all disgusted with Sir Augustus. He hasn't acted like a baronet at all. Although Mr. Daly is a commoner, we all like him much better. He has been most considerate in paying our board bill sometimes. In fact, he has been so kind that before we go 'ome we shall certainly present him with a testimonial."

(Redlands Citrograph:) South Riverside and Perris must both be growing right along. We notice both have been lifted to the dignity of having their postoffices made presidential. Good enough. Keen a-comin'. Hope a dozen more in Southern California may have the same thing done to them the coming year.

HEROINE OF A FAILURE.

MRS. CHARLES KNOWER RANDALL

hat Women are as Faithful Help meets to Their Husbands Now as in the Good Old Days—Facts and (CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.) NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—A living example—a handsome and charming one too, of how a woman can practically and financially prove the traditional helpmate of her husband, is found in Mrs. Helen Louise Randall, wife of the handsome header Charles Hower Beauty prominent broker, Charles Knower Ran-dall, for eighteen years a governor of New York's Stock Exchange.

A PROSPEROUS BEGINNING. When the young beauty and belle of contingent linked her future with that of the rich young Adonis of her choice, she little realized that in the turning of fortune's wheel the day would come when their vast store of this world's goods would be swept away without warning, and she must turn to and become a wage-earner to save a home for herself and husband.

Born in Albany, Mrs. Randall moved with her parents to New York in her childhood, and was educated in the city's most select school for young ladies. Marrying very young, she entered upon the usual career of the wealthy young matron, and devoted her days to a butterfly existence. With a congenial husband of whom she could be justly proud, and a lovely daughter, life was one long round of galety. When presto, almost in the twinkling of an eye came a crash in Wall street, carrying her husband's all with it, his health gave way, and she was left to battle with some of the hardships of which the work-a-day world is full. Almost crushed by the suddenness and the extent of the blow, Mrs. Randall for a moment did not know what to do, and then her real grit and strength of character came to her aid.

ON HER OWN RESOURCES.

ON HER OWN RESOURCES.
She had always possessed an artistic tendency, but had paid very little attention to its development. When this crisis came she turned to it as a possible resource, and it proved her mascot. Luck turned again, but the species of luck it was that goes with patience, perseverance and hard work.

Mrs. Randall and her husband were fortunate in their friends—the Vanderbilts, Astors, and other stars in the social firmament—for they were not deserted when their riches took wings, this fact proving the real worth of their good qualities.

A CHARMING INCIDENT. ON HER OWN RESOURCES.

A CHARMING INCIDENT. A trifling incident is a significant il-ustration of Mrs. Randall's fineness of character. On their departure from character. On their departure from their luxurious home, given over to their creditors, the last morning a message was carried to Mrs. Randall that a man waited below who had come to bid her good-by. A little puzzled she went down to face a plain but decent-appearing person whom to her knowledge she had never seen before.

"I came to wish you good-by," he explained.

More puzzled then ever, Mrs. Randall returned his farewell, and said, "I really do not know, you."

"Not know me! Why you have spoken to me every day for years, ever since I have been carrying out your ashes."

"Is it possible," she exclaimed, "that you are the ash man!"

"Yes, and I have many a time told my wife that when I was driving along my cart I was always glad to see Mrs. Randall coming for I was sure of a bow and some pleasant words, and I cleaned myself up today to come and say good-by and to tell you how sorry I am for your leaving." And Mrs. Randall is as proud of that simple laborer's regard as of the friendship of the Vanderbilts.

A BRILLIANT SUCCESS.

Having made up her mind to devote herself to art work, she began with a will, doing all sorts and kinds where she nerself to art work, she began with a will, doing all sorts and kinds where she could get orders, or found her productions salable. Her hand developed a marvelous cunning, and her brain kept pace. She crigipated choice designs and novel fancies, until today her work is beautiful and artistic in the extreme. Her china painting is exquisite—and sneaks for herself as she now receives $275 for a dozen plates decorated from her own designs. Her art embroideries are lovely to look upon, and she makes quite a specialty of pillows, each one a beauty. Though as yet almost a novice in her adopted profession, her fame is widespread, and during the holidays just passed she filled a thousand-dollar order from Florence, Italy, alone. Her lovely daughter has married advantageously, and her husband rises up to call her blest. Not satisfied with carrying him through the crises, now that Mr. Randall is restored to health and again taking up his share of the burden, his indefatigable wife is still at work that she may help him pay off every penny of his just debts.

CAROLYN HALSTED.

A COSTLY PRIVILEGE.

The Expense of Maintaining Mem-bership in a Fashionable Church. (CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.)

(CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.)

If you propose to attend a fashionable church prepare to put your hands deeply into your exchequer and make up your mind to do it cheerfully and without bargaining. The fashionable church provides you with dignity and privacy at your devotions; its atmosphere is kept all winter at a mellow temperature; its furnishings are complete, chaste and comfortable: the music inspiring and the service just as high or low as you please.

Of course, the expenses are a little staggering at first, but on the authority of a single woman, who claims membership in the most modish congregation of her city, $1000 a year about covers the cost of her church-going.

GENERAL EXPENSES.

Naturally that includes a great deal

Naturally that includes a great dea of charity dispensed through th clergyman's hands, but they are charities much in the nature of cast-iron obligations that the feminine element of a smart congregation must accept, and to avoid or ignore them would be a mistake indeed.

As connection with a leading church often leads to great things socially, for her who has ambitions to rise in that direction, quite aside from her natural religious aspirations, the expenses of Sunday attendance must be laid out with discretion.

A woman who wishes to introduce herself in a prominent church must dress well—not showlly, but with quiet richness, and with sufficient regard to fashion and detail to lift her above criticism.

SOME OF THE DETAILS.

It will be noticed whether her seal is in one of the moderately costly, moderately roomy pews in the body of the church, and whether she fills her racks with handsome, large service books, bound in flexible Russia leather or Morocco, bearing her name on the covers. Her engraved silver pew-plate will be judged by the size of her regular Sunday contribution, and her generosity measured by her gifts to, the cholifund, and her offerings on special days. In the fashionable church, however, vulgar extravagance is as deeply deplored as abject stinginess, and a fine conservatism governs everything. Not more than $5 ever week in the ordinary collection is considered sufficient and not less than $25 on the big feast days or special occasions, as hospital. Sunday, setc., covers that ground of one's duty. Among the dozen or more organizations, such as the King's Daughters. Day Nursery. Cirls' Friendly Society, etc., allied to each church, a woman member is almost obliged to connect herself with at least three. She may not have the time or inclination to work actively in these guilds, but she must show her sympathy by paying fees of membership, and making donations at intervals.

At Thanksgiving, Christmas and Easter another big tax will be levied in the ferm of contributions for decorations, so that the single woman who kept her accounts for attendance at a fashionable church for one year, roughly estimated some of the costs as follows: SOME OF THE DETAILS

roughly estimated some of the costs follows:	83
Pew rent	175

Sunday offerings	200
Four special offerings	100

easily accounted for when she figured in her contributions to trimming and lonating Christmas-tree ornaments and toys, that her name was down on the list subscribing a New Year's present for the clergyman, and the help they asked her to give with the fresh-air fund and lightening the church debt.

SCARCELY VOLUNTARY.

In addition she approved of a fund for a new organ, gave her mite toward fresh frescoes and lent some aid in for a new organ, gave her mite toward fresh frescoes and lent some aid in raising a memorial tablet to the late pastor. To have refused in any of these cases would have been grievously ungracious and to agree was merely to maintain her good standing. Her church year really began the 1st of October and ended in June, when the doors of the fashionable sanctuary closed, as usual, literally for lack of a summer congregation.

And yet this, she says, is not churchgoing on an extravagant scale. The wealthy matron with a family that attends regularly pays double and treble the amount given above for her privileges and standing in an important congregation. The big well-placed pews cost, from $300 to $500. Their rittings, books, cushions and foot-stools a full hundred more, and where a pew worth $5000 is the property of the family the church levies a tax of 5 per cent. on the whole value. The owner thereof is then expected to proportionately interest herself in the church guilds and societies, in the clergymany's $10,000 salary and the running expenses of the parish. To the thrifty church-woman who haunts the free sittings and puts one carefully hoarded dime on the plate Sunday morning, all this may seem hopeless extravagance, but truly it seems only justice when our rich women pay so much for the joys of an opera or lay out double the amount every year in 'diamonds.

FANNY ENDERS.

Dress the Neck Hecomingly.

Emma M. Hooper contributes an article in January Ladies' Home Journal upon "Dressing the Neck Becomingly," and asserts that the success of a toilette depends upon the neckwear. She describes (and Miss Underwood has illustrated) a number of collar effects, and has to say of the "handkerchief style," very popular just now: "The handkerchief collars consist of a double straight band of batiste or fine lawn, with four corners sewed on the top and turned over on the outside, leaving a division in the center, back and front, the corners are of batiste, tucked on the edge plain in the center, with a row of Valenciennes lace inlaid between. The four corners of a fine openwork handkerchief could be taken for this purpose. Sometimes a band of ribbon is fitted around the lawn band, and tied in a bow at the back; otherwise the band is worn inside of a high dress collar, with the points falling outside over the edges of the ollar." Dress the Neck Becomingly.

(Riverside Press:) The "Half Million Club," which made itself conspicuous a year ago by its tour through the State, during which its members preached good fellowship and made a market for the best eatables which the State produced, has decided to retire from business and leave the work of booming the State to other agencies. They were a set of jolly good fellows, who educated themselves, if nobody else, regarding the wonderful resources of their great State. But they are doubtless wise in making some more practical, if less noisy way of aiding the State's development.

Two world's records were broken recently in the tank of the Chicago Athletic Association. George A. Thorne swam 100 yards in 1:06 4-5, beating the previous mark of 1:08 3-5, held by himself. Sterling P. Wiley, a veteran of 35 years, glided through the water forty yards in the phenomenal time of 0:21 1-5, occasioning a break of 1 3-5s.

YVETTE GUILBERT.

Bab's Talk with the Fascinating French Woman.

Who Says that She Has No Love eyes,

Reautiful Creature Described. Confidential Chat on Art, Beauty and Love-Losing the Love of One's Heart.

Miss Vere de Vere and Jack Fin de Siecle-The Feminine Verdict-Giving the Benefit of the Doubt-Sitting in Judgment on Others.

(CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.) NEW YORK, Jan. 13, 1896 .- The very minute I saw the picture I said to myself, in that confidential way in which one does talk to one's self, "I must see that woman!" And by this I didn't mean simply seeing her on the stage, or seeing her after the fashion of re porters, but as one woman sees an-The picture? Well, she was standing in front of a mirror with her face turned partly toward you, and drawing the laces of her stays. she had done it so correctly that my admiration was hers, and my curiosity to see her, personally, was quite as great, as Lombroso says curiosity developed in a woman with fair hair and dark eyes. (By-the-bye, though, he says this isn't a mean curiosity; it is an intellectual one.) In the picture her stays were drawn in properly at waist line and spread out broadly and beautifully about the bust and her laces in that fashion has brains; the average woman pulls her laces up and down just as closely as she can, so that neither bust nor hips have an op-portunity to develop, she can't laugh with enjoyment, and her poor arms have no opportunity to express them-selves. And Yvette Guilbert certainly manages to express year much with selves. And Yvette Guilbert certainly manages to express very much with those long, slender arms and wonder-ful hands of hers.

THE FRENCH ARTIST'S IDEAL.
Dumas, the master of the heart of woman, and the art of the stage, said there were only two things worth considering in a play or a book, woman and love. Believe me, Yvette Guil-bert is worth studying. It makes no difference whether she speaks or not, and yet it does. For centuries poets have said there was a fascination in the silence of the Sphinx. Take my word for it, there is more fascination in the speech of a woman, especially and no jewels." Then I remember have thought it worth while to paint her, while the artist who draws the designs, the finest ones, for the Sevres vases, took Yvette Guilbert as a model, and gave thanks for the permission to picture her. She belittles ordinary beauty. The pink and white, the blue eyes, the small mouth, the dimpled figure with its eighteen-inch waist becomes as nothing beside this woman, whose figure is natural, whose eyes arc—what color are they? I only know this about them—since they first looked on the world, humanity has been their book, and they have read it well. Her hair is red, a perfect red, with not a dash of crimson in it, her skin is white, her mouth is large, her teeth are exquisite, and in ten minutes' speech with her, that mouth asumes hundreds of curves that each mean omething Sarah Bernhardt becomes nothing of a riddle before Yvette Guilbert. She says how kind the world has been to her. I look at her, and she is Gavroche, the poor little street boy, well acquainted with the slang of the day, clever, sympathetic, keen and yet willing, because somebody else is cold, to wrap his coat about him. Somebody, some reporter, wrote a story which was eaid to tell of the

LOVE OF YVETTE GUILBERT'S

LIFE. Bah! Women with eyes like hers don't tell of their loves; they suffer see her, and call her cone, which she is, and call her peculiar, which she is, but it takes always a woman to discover what she really is—the Sphinx of the Nineteenth Century.

I say to her, "What costume do you like?"

There is a light in the eyes, those won-derful eyes, that suggests feminially and its love for chiffons. And she says, and its love for chiffons. And she says, "I like a very quiet dress. I like a black dress, and one in which while I look well I am not noticeable."

There is a toss of the head, a shrus of the shoulders, a movement of those beautiful hands, and I realize that it is not Gavroche, the gamin, up to all the argot and all the tricks of the street to whom I am talking but the

WITH A WOMAN'S CURIOSITY.

I ask another question, "What do you consider a beautiful woman?" She looked at me, and then she seemed to look far off in the distance before she answered: "What is beauty in one climate is not beauty in an-other. I do not admire the English women; they are too regular and too lacking in expression. Your American women come nearer the French women than any other people, but then you are a new race, and from you should come the most beautiful women in the world. And time and time only will prove whether you have them, al-though I have seen many beautiful American women, and I must say for them that they dress elegantly and have that indefinable something which we call 'chic.' But a beautiul woman to me, and to my people, is a woman of expression; a woman whose eyes not only tell their story, but whose body in its litheness is most artistic. fat-fat is not beautiful. No dimples dimples are insipid; but expression, that is what makes a woman charming and that is what makes her fascinating to men. I have been told that your American men are generous—that they work, work, work, and are satisfied if their women are happy. Ah!, what superb husbands they must make. What do I love best to read? Old poetry. I like some of the modern novelists, particularly de Maupassant, because he wrote first about this, then about that, was universal, and an artist to his finger time.

when you realize that her speech conceals her thoughts. Here is a woman, not beautiful, as we reckon beauty, and yet the greatest artists in France have thought it worth while to paint what is good, and to say to this won-derful woman, "Come back to us and be welcomed heartily." In my cardbe welcomed heartily." In my card-case I carry a little card, which I value case I carry a little card, which I value yery much; it was written as a jest, but it was the expression of the likes and dislikes of this clever woman, put as she proudly said, in English. This is how it reads:

"I like the green. I like very much the lilac and the roses. I don't like the birds and selfish people. I believe in God. The quality I prefer in a human being is goodness for a girl, and honesty for a man."
"YVETTE GUILBERT."

THE SIN OF THOUGHTLESSNESS. Last night I saw a wonderful playstop Mr. Critic, I am not going to infringe on your grounds. It was called "The Benefit of the Doubt." and it was the judgment given in the divorce court when the only sin a woman had committed had been that of sympathizing with an unhappy husband and letting him find in her home a resting place from his wife's jealous temper, the sin of thoughtlessness. It was written by that wonderful playwright who seems to read a woman's heart as you might a fashion page, Pinero, and it showed what such a verdict meant to a woman. I do not know where this writer has gotten all his knowledge of womankind. There was the flippant mother, who found great relief, as do I love best to read? Old poetry. I like some of the modern novelists, them; they live in them, and sometimes they die of them. Somebody else, meaning to be polite and remembering her fondness for the white gown and black gloves, compared her to a bird. Never. Unless she was a dovo who sat on one of the trees in Paradise and cooed and wondered, as she heard the serpent tempting Eve. She looks as if she might carry out the theory of transmigration—as if she had known the history of every woman's heart since the world began. And men see her, and call her peculiar, which she is, but it takes always a woman to discover white she really is the Solvier. I call it fine, I can think of no other share in the friendship. I call that a worse verdict than guilty—that which only gives the woman the benefit of the doubt.

Little Mrs. Snowflake, who has known Tom Wildrake ever since they were children, lets him drop in at was more a note too high, or too low. Every syllable has its value, and I have only heard one other woman, whose French compared with that of Yvette Guilbert, and that was Sarah Bernhardt. Her work—well, you have heard enough about her work, and yet I wish instead of teaching her plantation melodies, so she may have some English songs in her repertoire, that some one would make her understand the meaning of the words, and once she did that, neither you nor I need doubt her ability to draw the pleture of that wonderful poem of Dante, Gabriel Rosettl's, which begins,

"Lazy, laughing, languishing Jenny, Fond of a kiss and fond of a guinea."

I have paid the usual fashionable call on mademoiselle, and it is time to such a pleasant country place, even this would not be the verdict. WOMAN AS JUDGE.

Miss Vere de Vere, in her early life, lost the love of her heart. But she has a good friend in Jack Fin de Siecle, who knew her sweetheart, who was with him when he died, and who can talk over her happy days with her. Everybody knows his character. That is, everybody who is anybody. Sud-denly Miss Vere de Vere finds that the elderly flowers of society are not encerty nowers of society are not enxious to have her associate with their buds, and she has to face the question, "Shall I give up this man friend, to whom I am really a helper, and from whom I gain much that is comforting, and with whom there is nothing that the angels in heaven nothing that the angels in might not see or hear, or shall I suffer from the benefit of the doubt?" This is always a feminifie verdict. I don't care who the judge may be that gives t. No matter how much he man consider himself a man, at heart he is a woman, for it is the woman who gives to that other woman nothing more than the benefit of the doubt. One question is asked in the play, it is this: 'Must a woman lose her character and paint her face before she can have a man as a friend?" As the world goes, am tempted to answer "Yes," but one of the people in the play says, "This is a damnable world." There he is

THE WORLD IS BEAUTIFUL.
It is the people who are not brave enough to give verdicts of "Guilty" or "Innocent" who are damnable, many are there in this big town are only given the benefit of doubt? Some of them are as innocent as the girl-child that you hold up closely to you; but when all woman-kind shrank from them, they got so they didn't care. And then there could be no doubt of the verdict. Others and there are no martyrs who suffer as they do-have kept their own self-respect and gone out of this wicked world with that intangible verdict hanging over them.

It was a harlot who came to Christ, and His verdict was different from that of the judge today. He only asked of her that she sin no more, and He forgave her because she loved too much. And there are human beings who sit upon the judgment seat and only give women the benefit of the datable who state had been been the same likes? ally give women the benent of the coubt. What are their own lives? And what are the lives of those women in society who throw about innocent women that intangible atmosphere that means, while it does not say, "Keep away from her, she is evil?". If it were on your soul or mine to he done this, what can we hope for? you believe give anybody the benefit of the doubt?

THAT GREAT JUDGE WILL AT
Oh, no. He will say "Guilty" or "Innocent," and He will consider all of the temptations. Today, as I tore the page off my Dickens's calendar I read this:
"May I tell you why it is a good thing for us to remember the wrong that has been done to us? That we may forgive it." And that I believe is the judgment that will be given to many a woman who has not sinned, but who has been judged by the Vehmgericht of the world and received from it as her verdict "the benefit of the doubt." God help her who receives this judgment! I do not need to ask God to punish them who give it upon her, and yet you and her neighbor who innocence, the verdict of the world, that damnable verdict, "the benefit of the doubt," may never be given to your child, or her child, or to Canada's Position.

Canada's Position.

(San Francisco Call:) Canada is one of the reasons why England will be very slow to provoke war with the United States. While our military people are talking of the cheerful case with which we might selze Canada and thus destroy the only frontier that exists between Great Britain and the United States they fail to take into account the fact that Canada might anticipate us by falling willingly and adding her strength to that of the United States against England. It is true that States against England. It is true that States against England. It is true that Canada could not oppose an armed invasion from the United States, and that if we should seize the Welland Canal and the Canadian Pacific Railroad the Domínion would be at our mercy. England then would need another Wolfe to scale the Heights of Abraham.

Although the sentiment of Canada is against annexation to the United States, and although her system of government is totally different from ours and would have to suffer a violent wrenching in the amalgamation, the internal affairs of Canada are now in a bad way, and a very serious and portentous division has arisen among the people. It is all over the use of public school funds in Manitoba. The fight has been waging for more than a year; it at last has culminated in the resignation of seven members of the Cabinet, and this will likely cause the overthrow of the present government in elections called to fill their places. This nation of seven members of the Cabinet, and this will likely cause the overthrow of the present government in elections called to fill their places. This would mean merely that the policy and influence of the crown are unpopular with the majority. The home party has grown strong within recent years.

It is a curious fact that Canada is not at all perturbed over fumors of war between the United States and England. Within the last few days there has been a little talk of increasing the defenses, but there its in Canada nothing like the interest that throbs throughout England. This indifference is extraordinary. Can it be that while Canada has no idea of seceding from the crown it would not seriously object to being taken by the United States? Does England see nothing strange or ominous in the apathy of its ward? If it does, can this be taken as one of the reasons why England is so anxious not to precipitate a fight with this country? Canada never had any great value from our point of view until the Canadian Pacific was built and a large share of the traffic of the Orient was thereby diverted from us; but England cannot be blind to the fact that under present conditions it would be greatly to secure possession of this great empire of the north, and that in the event of war it would be necessary.

WINTER BOOKS.

Betting on Future Turf Events is

The making of future books on Important American races is yearly being gradually discontinued, and it is doubtful if in 1896 there is any c stake race of sufficient general interest and importance to cause any spirited revival in this line of industry. Some years ago, when there was not constant racing of fair-class horses throughout the winter months, as is now the vogge, the blokkmakers' lists of prices on such events as the Louisville Derby, the Suburban-handicap, and, later, Chicago's American Derby, were looked for and welcome visitors.

Previous to the year 1896, and including that year, all the bookmakers of note regularly went into the business of future bookmaking. During that year it was effectually demonstrated to them that the game of futures was not always a winning one for its backers, and future bookmaking today is almost a thing of the past.

DESPAIR OF THE PEOPLE.

The feeling of gloom amounting al most to despair, which took possession of the people cannot be described. Som were bitterand railed against luck; some accepted the plague as fate is stoica silence. But a sense of the utter weak silence. But a sense of the utter weak-ness of human power pervaded the town and this filled the churches as never before. Special prayer-meetings to petition divine help were held, and there was little laughing at this, even by the most skeptical. We heard of farmers' families in Kansas and Ne-braska who were starving because ev-erything green including the crops had brasac, who were starting because everything green, including the crops, had been destroyed. This meant no food, no money, nothing for the coming winter. Trains went through carrying supplies from the East to the grasshopper sufferers further west, free of

PRAYERS FOR HELP. The excitement and fun caused by this episode soon passed by, and the weight of the plague settled down more heavily than ever. The pastors of the different churches in Warrens burg met together for praye and conference, and the outcome was the appointment of a day of fasting and prayer to petition Almighty God to remove from our midst the devastating plague. The notice was published in the papers like a Thanksgiving day proclamation, changing thanks to petition for mercy, of course. The Governor of the State gave his written sanction, and this was printed with the

DEPARTURE OF THE LOCUSTS.

It is more than two decades now stop until the track ahead was cleaned once the "grasshopper years" of 1872, 73 and '74, and their very memory seems almost to have disappeared from the public mind. To those of us, howwho passed through the visitaever, who passed through the visitation, which brought complete devastation to all growing crops in Colorado. Nebraska and Kansas, causing widespread suffering and destitution and seriously affected most States west of the Mississippi, the memory of those years is still a vivid one. And during the harvest months of autumn last, when news of bountiful crops, unmarred by insect or other plaugues was being received, this memory became being received, this memory became more vivid by very contrast. We in Missouri had heard and read of the plague in "poor, droughty Kan-sas," but there was little fear felt that the insects would come further east, for the papers assured us that scientists had found the habitat of the locusts to be the Rocky Mountains, and study of previous plagues of this sort had shown that the insects' flight was regulated that the insects' flight was regulated by such infinite limitations as to time and distance, that their return trip westward was near at hand, and so Missouri might congratulate herself on being not only beyond the great drought belt, but also east of the locust line. But the locusts refused to follow the course of conduct declared to be theirs. They came, they saw, they conquered. THE COMING OF THE HOPPERS. One very hot day—I was a little girl One very hot day—I was a little girl then—I was sent to the postoffice to get

supplies from the East to the grasshopper sufferers further west, free of charge.

At about this time the State Entomologist of Missouri went to Warrensburg, the seat of the largest State Normal School, and held a consultation with the faculty, some of whom were enthusiastic scientists, as to his theory that these locusts were the same as those which John the Baptist ate with wild honey in the wilderness.

The starving people, he said, would find these locusts as nutritious food as oysters if they could only be induced to put aside prejudice and eat them. An exemple must be set first by influential persons. Entomologist Riley was not the man to preach and fail to practice. He and a few friends and the whole Normal School faculty, of whom the principal was the well-known educator and author, James Johonnot, had "a grasshopper dinner" as people called it in ridicule. It was served at one of the hotels, as no housekeeper could be found who was ready to run the gauntlet of public criticism for superintending so barbaric a feast. The heads, outer wings and the hind legs were taken off from the insects, and then they were served in various ways; soup was made which was declared to be as good as any to be founds a la John the Baptist style, i. e., with honey, except that the locusts were browned crisp like coffee kernels then—I was sent to the postofice to get the mail. I saw the men out in front of their stores looking up- at the sun through smoked glass and talking excitedly. Suddenly there was a loud pattering like hall on my little parasol, on the pavement, the fences, the streets and the roofs of the houses—everywhere. It was a hailstorm of grasshoppers. Looking up there seemed to be a great, wide-spreading, dark cloud slowly descending. In childish fright I ran, but there was no escape; hoppers to right of me, hoppers to left of me, were flying and jumping.

They lit on my shoes, my hat and my dress skirts in squadrons. The ground was literally covered with the strange, unwelcome visitors. Out of breath from my frightened run, I stopped to rest under a tree by a neighbor's back yard, where there was a flock of fowls. In watching their crazy delight over this unexpected and unlimited feast, I soon forgot my fear. They dashed around with outspread wings, made wild leaps and little flights in the air, tumbling over each other in their eagerness. They devoured the insects so fast as almost to choke themselves, but kept cackling and gobbling and quacking between mouthsful, as if saying:

"Git all you can; keep what you git, and git a-plenty while you're a-git-in"."

Dogs barked and howled and some

Dogs barked and howled and some ran cowering into shelter. Horses were frightened and tried to get away from such an unheard-of shower.

These grasshoppers as we called them—though they were really locusts—were much larger than the common insects known by that name, and their heads were much larger in proportion to their bodies. Their eyes bulged out in a way to make them seem actually to have an impish expression of countenance, as they would turn their heads from side to side and move their curiously split mouths in "chewing their tobacco," as we children called the dark brown liquid which they seemed to roll around in their jaw as cows do their cuds. The long hind legs and outer wings were rough and strong. The fowls, after their first ravenous appetites were appeased would try to pick these wings and the legs off before eating the insects. The fowls became thin from their continued grasshopper odder and volks of the every were readed. thin from their continued grasshopper diet and yolks of the eggs were red. Everybody did without eggs and fowls

The grasshoppers preferred the rankest-tasting vegetation and so took peach leaves, oak leaves, tomato vines, jimson weed and rag weed first. These having been devoured clear down to the roots and branches (many of the trees looked as bare as in November.) they attacked everything green, in discriminately. The bare stones of the hadf-ripe peaches and plums were left in pitiful grotesqueness hanging on the trees. In flower gardens the foliage was often eaten and the bright flowers left on the leafless stalks.

Many people did not abandon their gardens to the ravages of the enemy until after heroic resistence had been made. Paris green and other poisons were sprinkled over the gardens. The hoppers seemed to thrive on the diet. Whole families would go out and beat the ground with tree branches thus driving the insects out of the yard, like swarms of bees—but to see them return with reinforcements or added regiments. Kerosene oil was put into sprinkling pots and scattered broadcast over the millions, and then pleces of burning paper, or pine were thrown about. Long ditches, three feet deep, were dug and the hoppers by means of brooms and branches of trees, were urged to hop into them, and then oil and fire were put into the trenches.

To see the millions thus slaughtered, gave courage for the time to keep on waging war, but results did not justify the hope, for it certainly seemed as if a hundred came to attend the funeral of each slain comrade.

They attacked the grass, after gardens had been eaten bare, and for some anknown reason they would leave large spaces in some fields and lawns untouched, while in adjoining parts every space of green was devoured.

Some housewives had sad experiences, clothes drying on the lines being riddled with holes. One lady's parlor was invaded and, when she entered the room she found the lower quarter of each of the lace curtains lying separated from the rest on the floor; they had been chewed straight off, on a line with the window sill, by the omniverous pests.

consciously-eloquent petitions for divine mercy. The essentials of true prayer are sometimes given in four words, whose initials spell "acts"—adoration, confession, thanksglving and supplication. These conditions were fully realized on that day. The people pleaded with tears to be shown their sins, for which this punishment was sent, that they might put them away. The sense of the nearness of God and of utter dependence upon His mercy was enough to impress even a child with the most reverential solemnity. The times of penitence and appeal to God for help of the Children of Israel have always been much more vivid to me because of the experience of that day. When the churches closed at sunset, a sense of peace and resignation, if not of hope, filled all hearts. The next day there was family worship in homes long indifferent to any Christian service, except formal church attendance. There were gatherings of neighbors i nthe afternoon in one another's homes for united prayer.

And the hordes of insects—what of them in the meanwhile? They continued steadily on their devastating way. And the next morning after the day of prayer the disheartening word went round that more swarms of them were to be seen in the sky; they had not begun to light yet, but probably would by afternoon or evening. They were more and more plainly to be seen, seeming to fly lower all the time.

DEPARTURE OF THE LOCUSTS.

But the direful-looking clouds did not descend. They swept on over the town; more clouds passed over. Then the truth was seen. The grasshoppers were leaving. Soon they were rising everywhere in great swarms and joining the clouds which we had seen passing over. By the evening of the next day there was scarcely a grasshopper left. pests.
At night, the grasshoppers went reg-ularly to roost. They chose the western sides of fences, houses and harns, where the setting sun shone hottest, and cov-ered every inch of space, so one could not tell the color of the paint under-menth.

The desire to the color of the paint unuereath.

Papers in the East told of the stopping of trains by grasshoppers. Friends wrote to inquire, thinking the whole thing must be a pure fabrication. Of course the trains were not stopped by mounds of insects piled up like snow banks in front of the enging, as some seemed to think, but their quantity was so great as to clog the engine wheels, and their crushed bodies made the rails so slippery that 'trains had to the rails so slippery that 'trains had to the rails and sometimes had to

We hoped against hope, day after day and week after week, that the insects would take their flight. Instead of this, they settled down to preparations for restrains the man who has conceived and cherished the idea. The fear of punishment, by the way, is not at present very great, as the reward for apprehending a deserter has been reduced from $60 to $10 and the officer making the arrest must pay the expense of delivering the deserter to the nearest post out of his small reward. The indications are that officers of the line, however those of the staff may feel, think that to get rid of a man who is possessed of the desire to desert is a distinct advantage and the sooner such a one cuts and runs the better it is for the service. When descriters are caught, however, they are severely punished by imprisonment at hard labor and a conviction takes from a man the privileges of citizenship.

There are less than forty recruiting stations at present in the United States and these are scattered over the country from Boston to San Francisco. Last November about two hundred and fifty recruitis were secured and Boston supplied mose than any other station. New York next, St. Louis next, then St. Paul, then Albany. For many years

Los Angeles, Jan. 1st, 1893,

To The Public:—

I was seriously afflicted for about ten years with iung, ilver and kidney troubles Tongue could never express the misery I endured during those years. I was reduced in flesh until I was a mere skeleton—my sight and hearing were badly impaired; was constantly troubled with constipation and piles and had a severe chronic cough. In short, life was a burden and death would have been a welcome guest. I was treated by various specialists from the United States and Canada, but of no avait. I tried all the patent medicines and pills I ever heard of, but these only gave temporary re liet. Through the persistent advice of friends. I finally resolved to give Dr. Wong Him, of 639 Upper Main street, a trial. Of course, like many others, I had no faith in a Chinese doctor, but it only took a few doses of his life-giving herbs to knock all the skepticism out of meand give medimplicit faith in his superhuman skill. In just five weeks the doctor pronounced me cured and nowl can truthfully say that I never was healthier, and never felt better in my life. My sight and hearing are both fully restored that obnoxious d cough, constipation; and lies are entirely cured and I am rapidly gaining in flesh—having gained 40 pounds of the carnestly recommend all sufferers and skepiics to give the doctor a trial and be convinced of his superfor skill as a physician.

Yours respectfully.

UNCLE SAM'S SOLDIER BOYS.

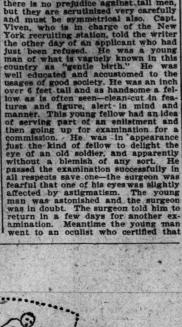

THE UNITED STATES ARMY IS SMALL, BUT ITS MEN ARE

How to Get Into the Ranks—Applicants Have to Pass a More Severe Examination Than Those of Any Other Nation—All Must Be Citizens and the Majority are of American Birth-Provision for Retired Privates-The Physical Standard Required.

(From a Special Contributor to The Times.)

It seems to be the general belief, perhaps because the United States army is small in numbers, that its file is made up of rather inferior men. Probably this idea was always wrong. Certainly it is today entirely unfounded, for the very good reason that the standard by which applicants for enlistment are measured is higher in the United States than in any other country in the world, and the boys who wear the blue are as fine specimens of healthy and intelligent manhood as were ever mustered under a flag.

When the industrial conditions are such that every man who wishes to work can feel sure of steady and well-paid employment, the inducement to enlist is not so great as it is during seasons of business depression. For three years past, however, work has been hard to get, and consequently the ranks of the army are today practically filled, and recruiting officers have been instructed to take no applicants at the kind of fellow to delight the eye of an old solder, and apparently without a blemish of any sort. He passed the examination successfully in all respects save one—the surgeon was muster, need not feel apprehensive as to his health. To each man who expresses a desire to enlist are shown the questions he must answer, and the examination he must undergo before he files a formal application, and this un-

30 years of age are now accepted, and most men are at their best physically during that period of life. That only 6 per cent, pass the examinations indicates one of two things—either that the applicants are a poor lot, or that the scriptiny is very severe. Unquestionably the latter is the true explanation, and the writer makes this statement after careful examination of the facts. The applicants are of a very good average, and the rejection of 95 per cent of their number is due to the strict enforcement of the army regulations as to enlistments.

HOW MEN GET INTO THE ARMY.

HOW MEN GET INTO THE ARMY. How MEN GET INTO THE ARMY.
When a man wants to enlist, he usually has a talk with a sergeant or other non-commissioned officer, and this veteran of the ranks finds out in ahort order whether it is worth the application. If there is a chance for him, he is told to fill out a blank, in which he inserts quite complete information about himself, such as the date and place of his birth, nativity, and residence of parents, height, weight, chest measurement, expiration and inspiration of lungs, nature of sickness suffered in the past, habits as to the use of liquors, status as to imprisonment or arrests, attendance at school, and so on. Then he must supply two references—preferably those of cleroymen, school(cachattendance at school, and so on. Then he must supply two references—preferably those of clergymen, schoolteachers or public officers. These references, by the way, must be genuine, as they are invariably investigated before the applicant is accepted.

It is interesting to note just here, that though army officers, as a rule, hold army chaplains in tolerably pooresteem, they have a high regard for the cloth generally and prefer that an applicant should be recommended by a dominie rather than by any other man.

by a dominic rather than by any other man.

The applicant is allowed to state whether he wishes to go into the foot or the mounted service, and his desires are generally respected. For infantry a man must not be less than 5 feet 4 inches in height, and weigh not less than 123 pounds, nor more than 130 pounds. For cavalry the height must not be less than 5 feet 4 inches nor more than 5 feet 10 inches, while the weight and chest measurements are as follows:

For a man 5 ft. 4 in. tall, weight 123 lbs., chest 23 in.

For a man 5 ft. 5 in. tall, weight 132 lbs., chest 33 in.

For a man 5 ft. 7 in. tall, weight 134 lbs., chest 34 in.

For a man 5 ft. 9 in. tall, weight 141 lbs., chest 34 in.

For a man 5 ft. 9 in. tall, weight 141 lbs., chest 34 in.

For a man 5 ft. 9 in. tall, weight 148 lbs., chest 34 in.

For a man 5 ft. 9 in. tall, weight 148 lbs., chest 34 in.

For a man 5 ft. 10 in. tall, weight 155 lbs., chest 345 in.

If the regulations should be stretched

A main with mas passed an examination for a life insurance policy, if he be of sensitive nature, is apt to feel that he has been turned inside out and all of his personal secrets placed to necord. But such an examination is not a circumstance to that to which those ambitious to serve in the army must submit. If these examinations were merely nominal, they would not be worthy of comment, but they are rigid as veteran soldiers and scientifical medical men can make them. When the applicant goes up for examination he is weighed, measured and described by a agreant, and a blank filled out which, when complete, reveals every possible thing about the applicant's physical structure and condition. He is scrutinised by the recruiting officer, and then the applicant goes before the surgeon and is stripped that the medical men may verify the previous examination. on record. But such an examination is not a circumstance to that to which those ambitious to serve in the army must submit. If these examinations were merely nominal, they would not be worthy of comment, but they are rigid as veteran soldiers and scientifical medical men can make them. When the applicant goes up for examination he is weighed, measured and described by a sargeant, and a blank filled out which, when complete, reveals every possible thing about the applicant's physical structure and condition. He is scrutinized by the recruiting officer, and then the applicant goes before the surgeon and is stripped that the medical men may verify the previous examination. This is done in the most minute way, and a certificate that is as exact as may be is given. If he be accepted the recruiting officer, and if the enlistment be in New York he is sent to David's Island and from there to the command with which he is to serve.

Men are not enlisted specially for the artillery, but the most intelligent of those who go into the mounted forces are selected for this arm of the service when there are vacancies in it. The artillery, therefore, is composed of picked men, and this accounts for the strikingly manly bearing of these soldiers whenever they are seen on parade. The most recent instances of the effect of discipline in good men was offered by the artillery in Chicago. A caisson blew up during the railroad riots, but there was no confusion save that caused immediately by the explosion, which killed several men and horses; a little later, in the same regiment, there was another explosion, but the men just after this emptied the caissons of ammunition as gally as though the carridges had been stuffed with harmless sawdust.

One of the questions asked of an applicant is: "Have you given a true name and not as assumed one?" A young fellow a little disgruntled with life on account of some triding backset in business on in love is as likely as not to conclude to bury himself in the army. Such as the previous process to b

Sidney. When his term was out his captain said to him:

"Sidney, it is none of my business, out, just out of curiosity I should like to know what your real name is?"

"As, captain," the corporal answered. I was afraid you would penetrate me disguise. I did not like to use me full name while serving in the ranks, so I lropped me family name. Me full name, saptain, is Philip Sidney de Montnorency."

PRESIDENT DOLE OF HAWAII.

INTERVIEW BY OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT IN HONOLULU.

TERM OF SERVICE AND RE EN

TERM OF SERVICE AND RE-ENLISTMENT.

The term of service in the army is now three years, and the number of men about 20,000; and, therefore, it is necessary to secure each year by enlistments and reenlistments something like seven thousand men. About one thousand of these are reenlistments of men who become attached to the service, or who acquire what might be called the army habit. The examination of a man who has served one enlistment or more and has a good record is naturally less severe than that given to a new recruit, for the man of experience may have acquired blemishes as incidents of his services, and these, unless debilitating, are quite properly not counted against him. The man of experience, too, is considered a much more valuable soldier than the novice.

But the scheme of the statute under which recruiting is done, while it encourages reelistments, also provides for the probable return of discharged soldiers to civil life. Now, when a man is discharged he is not reenlisted until three months after that time if he care for such a furbough, so that he can have a taste of civil life, and this period is counted as a part of his service. The idea of this is twofold. A trained and experienced soldier is thought to be at once a better citizen in time of emergency when the available men of the country might have to be called to arms. But a man who serves more than two enlistments is very apt to stay in the army until disabled or retired. Provision is made for the retirement of soldiers after thirty years's service on three-fourths pay, three-fourths commutation for ciothing and subsistence, the allowance to be made on the basis of the pay that was received when the retirement occurred. Thus it will be seen that the government looks after the old soldiers with much consideration.

A private receives $13 a month for the first two years of enlistment and $14 a month for the third year, if he has

ment looks after the old soldiers with much consideration.

A private receives $13 a month for the first two years of enlistment and $14 a month for the third year, if he has served faithfully, and the writer was informed by Capt, Viven that a careful man could easily save $500 during the three years. This would seem to be impossible, but it should be borne in mind that a soldier's clothing, quarters and food are supplied to him. Considering these facts, in connection with the advantages of the post schools, libraries, gymnasiums and canteens, a term of service in the United States army cannot be considered as other than a wholesome and beneficial experience. To those who fret at restraint and who cannot submit themselves to discipline an army experience is likely to be very valuable unless the lawless soldier be driven to desertion.

CONCERNING DESERTION.

CQNCERNING DESERTION.

The desire to desert," said Capt. Viven, "can be cured by death only. A man may serve two years or six years, but if he is a deserter by nature he is sure to take unceremonious leave at the least expected moment."

Capt. Viven "does not believe that raising the pay or improving the condition of the soldier has any effect upon the percentage of desertions. Nothing save the inability to secure employment in civil life and the fear of punishment restrains the man who has conceived

Good for the Mayor.

(Exchange.) The following incident took place a few years ago in a city of Tennessee:

A poor little girl was peddling apples in a railway station. A train was about starting, and almost at the last moment a tall, ruffianly passenger stepped off the cars and called for 15 cents worth of apples. The girl counted them out, the man took them, and then, as he moved toward the car, began feeling in his pocket as if for the money. The change was not forthcoming, he was on the steps, the train began to move, the girl ran eagerly after it, and there stood the man on the platform, laughing at her.

By good luck, the Mayor of the city happened to be among the bystanders, a war veteran, with a tender heart and a contempt for all meanness. He ran at once to the superintendent's office and said:

"Til give you a hundred dollars to stop that train and have it backed into the station."

The offer was promptly accepted, a telegram dispatched, and very soon the player of the joke found himself in the hands of the police. He paid the girl her 15 cents, of course, and offered to pay her a great deal more, but the officers were inexorable, and, to the gratification of the lookers-on, he was marched off to jail.

save the inability to secure employment in civil life and the fear of punishment; restrains the man who has conceived and cherished the idea. The fear of punishment, by the way, is not at present very great, as the reward for apprehending a deserter has been reduced from $60 to $10 and the officer making the arrest must pay the expense of delivering the deserter to the nearest post out of his small reward. The indications are that officers of the line, however those of the staff may feel, think that to get rid of a man who is possessed of the desire to desert is a distinct advantage and the sooner such a one cuts and runs the better it is for the service. When deserters are caught, however, they are severely punished by imprisonment at hard labor and a conviction takes from a man the privileges of citizenship.

There are less than forty recruiting stations at present in the United States and these are scattered over the country from Boston to San Francisco. Last November about two hundred and fifty recruits were secured and Boston supplied more than any other station. Now York next, St. Louis next, then St. Paul, then Albany, For many years after the civil yar the majority of the enlisted men were of foreign birth and many of them are especially interested in the reports that President Civeland com-

"What would be the result of such an action?" I asked.

To this the President answered. "If universal suffrage is to be extended upon this question, it is hard to tell what would be the result. If, however, the vote be taken basing suffrage upon the constitution of 1887. I have no doubt that a vote in favor of annexation would be the outcome. If we are not annexed now, we shall simply wait patiently until another administration of course the reins of government, when we hope to be admitted into the fold of the United. States continues to refuse annexation, is it probable that Great Britain will be asked to assume a protectorate?" I queried.

THE MOST FAMOUS TRIUMPH OF

se of All the War Talk-It May Set Germany and Great Britain Fighting Furiously-The South

(CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.)

In recent years the powers of Europe found it to their mutual interest to come together and reach an agreement on the subject of Africa. Things had assumed a very complicated aspect in the dark continent and the rival powers were all at sea as to who owned certain territories within its limits. Accordingly the diplomats held a series of meetings at Berlin, Paris and Vienna, and the result has become famous under the name of the Partition of Africa. What that partition was may be gathered from an inspection of the accompanying chart, which is the first accurate treaty map of Africa ever published on this side of the water.

is the first accurate treaty map of Africa ever published on this side of the water.

The partition was very unlucky. It led to no end of disagreement. That disagreement has now reached an acute stage in this row over the Transvaal. No one has alluded to the fact that all the powers concerned in the partition, namely, Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy, Spain and Portugal, claimed dominion over the rich little strip of country known as the South African Republic. It was finally agreed that the republic should be recognized as an independent power, but that its foreign relations should be entirely under the control of Great Britain. In return for this, Portugal was permitted to acquire possession of a large slice of coast territory in the eastern part of Africa.

It was a very unfortunate bargain. It is the cause of all the trouble today between Germany and Great Britain. Germany claims that Great Britain. Germany claims that Great Britain has not kept faith with it, because it has advanced money to Portugal (somebody is always advancing money to Portugal and never getting it back again,) with the distinct understanding founded in 1840, but was not recognized as a free and independent state until 1854. But in 1880 the little republic had actually a war with Great Britain, and strange as it may seem, it forced that country to submit by thrashing British troops. Johannesburg, the town which figured so prominently in the recent war dispatches, has a population of 20,000. The capital, Pretoria, has $6500 inhabitants. President Krueger has served three times in his present office. He will be 70 years old next October. He has ten grown children. The Transvaal is rich in gold.

So much for the present condition of things. It all grows out of the partition of Africa. That remarkable performance is today the most important agreement in diplomacy, and certainly the most famous concert ever entered into by civilized nations since the Middle Ages. It seems to be going to pieces, and to be creating a general European smash-up. But to the diplomats it is what Blenheim was to Marlborough—a famous victory.

THE FRINGE OF BOYALTY.

(CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.) Recently, when in London, I had the good fortune to board with a private family of moderate means, but comprising among its members several very clever daughters. One of these daughters was companion to a lady in Denmark, who was an intimate friend of the dowager Queen. Thus it happened that the young lady companion became a frequent visitor at the palace, and was indebted to the queen for many social favors.

THE PARTITION OF AFRICA.

that Portugal should place her territory in Africa at the disposal of Great Britain. It will be remembered that the King of Portugal was lately in London on his usual errand of borrowing money; and the violation of the partition, to use the diplomatic term, is alleged to have been then consummated.

Now, the violation of the partition is Emperor William's excuse for having sent his famous message of congratulation to President Krueger. Of course, it is impossible to determine which side is right. There is always the awkward ethical conundrum of the right of the powers Italy has had the worst luck. By the terms of the partition, each country was at liberty to obtain possession of its African territories by conquest. They all conquered except Italy. That unfortunate country got Abyssinia and Harar for its share of Africa, and every Italian army sent thither has been soundly thrashed by the natives. Lobengula gave the British some hard work, but they downed him at last, Harar has been the scene of some very bloody battles of late, and the theater of war is now Abyssinia.

The net results of the partition are a lot of boundary disputes and the creation of a fierce native African army scattered over the continent in detachments. These detachments are surreptitiously armed, it is claimed, by agents of the royal powers. Thus Germany accusses Great Britain of having secretly armed the blacks in German East Africa. Other powers make similar accusations against their neighbors.

The British South Africa Company has become very prominent as a result

Although the natives, when asked what kind of government they prefer, would invariably answer: "Me vote our Queen," not one of them for a moment would think of asserting that wish by lorse, except in a feeble way under the lead of some white adventurer. And, though they favor a reëstablishment of the Queen in preference to the continuance of the present government, every one with whom I have spoken would like to have his country annexed to the United States.

And such a primtive old soul, with the most limited range of ideas! However, once recovered from the momentary shock, we entered upon the most joyous time. The ancient dame was manifestly on pleasure bent, and the everydayness of our lives was full of fresh interest to her. Her credulous curiosity about America sorely tempted one-to indulge in weird and fanciful tales for her benefit, although the ordinary affairs of life carried on by means of electric buttons and telephones furnished a sufficiently fairy-like element. Fortunately, she had a sense of humor, and this, with her naive interest and broken English, made the evening delightfully amusing. The one thing she knew well was court etiquette.

She went from us directly to Mariborough House, where she met with a coddial reception from the Princess of Wales, who escorted her to Windsor the next day, in the same gown and dined by Her Imperial Majesty and Queen of all the English, And this is the nearest I have yet come to touching the fringe of royalty

A Fooless and Her Pup.

(The Californian, Bakersfield:) A fooless up in Fresno, who had a dog for a pet when she ought to have had a baby instead, had the good fortune to lose the canine. Thereupon she wrote out a death notice, took it to the Republican office and had it published, the advertising clerk supposing from the name that it was some Chinese infant, who had died. The notice rend as follows:

Subsequently the facts were disclosed, and A. J. Waterhouse paid his respects to the fooless and her pup as follows:

This right, of course, does not include the right to conduct the water through intervening private lands, either in or out of the city. This is a mater much less important, and the Mexican laws seem to indicate that private property could be devoted to such use, but that the owner must be compensated therefor. This brings me to the subject of the right of the city to the ditch in controversy.

"The dam and ditch are situated on the Providencia rancho, some five or six miles north of the city limits, and the water has been by means thereof diverted from the Los Angeles River by the city, and conducted to the city and there distributed for public and private use. The complaint alleges that the city is the owner of all the water of the river from its source to the south city boundary. The answer denies the right and title of the city to the ditch and dam, and denies that the city has any right or title to the waters of the river fiowing in any part of its course within the Providencia rancho. The defendants are the owners of the part of the Providencia rancho through which the river runs at the place in controversy, and, while they admit that the city may have some right to the water flowing in the river below their lands, they claim that the right does not extend to their lands, nor to any water of the river in that part of its course included within their boundaries, but that, on the contrary, they are the exclusive owners of the waters of the river and of the right to control the flow, and to the use thereof, within said boundaries. The city has been, for some years prior to 1892, diverting the water at a point below the defendants' land, and in that year it changed the place of diversion to the point in controversy, and its right to do this is the question for consideration. The case naturally falls in two divisions: First, as to the right of the city to diver the water of the river at the dam in controversy; and, secondly, as to its title to the dam and ditch.

1. The first point in order is one of great importance to this city, and somewhat out of proportion to; the great importance to this city, and somewhat out of proportion to the interests at stake in this action, The right of a riparian owner to the water of a stream does not extend above his own boundaries, except so far interruption. He cannot, by virtue of any riparian right, go above his own land to divert the water so as to carry it over his neighbor's land to points on his own land. If it is necessary for him to do this in order to make use of the water he must nurshess the second carry in the sec his own land. If it is necessary for him to do this in order to make use of the water he must purchase the right from his neighbor. The city, therefore, cannot claim any right as a lower riparian owner to divert this water at the point in dispute here. Its right, if it has any, is derived from some other source. It is shown by the evidence that the water diverted at the point in controversy is necessary for the use of the city and its inhabitants, and that in order to carry it to the portion of the city supplied from this ditch it is necessary to divert it on the defendants land and at this particular point.

At common law any person having the right to divert water from a stream, whatever may be the origin of the right, may change the place of diversion, the place of use, and the purpose of use at his pleasure; provided, others are not injured by the change. (Kidd vs. Laird, 15 Cal. 181.) There is no evidence to show that the defendants would at present suffer any actual pecuniary loss by the change of the place of diversion from a point below their boundary to a point above a portion of their lands. They have never used the water on their land for any purpose, and it does not appear that they intend to. As riparian owners they have no right to use it elsewhere. But one of the rights of a riparian proprietor is that of having the stream the west side of Chicago street, frood of the rest work was published December 17. Time for protest expired January 2. much thereof the city has no right or title.

It remains to consider the right to the original ditch. Whatever right the city may have in this ditch must be based on the deed of De la Osa to Verdugo of October 3, 1846. Under this deed the ditch was located and constructed and by conveyances became vested in the Canal and Reservoir Company in 1868. That company then made it a part of its system, whereby it took water from the river at the head of the ditch and conducted it to the city. In 1872 the city leased its entire canal, including this ditch as a part, and under this lease the city, as a tenant holding over, has ever since continued to, use all of the ditch north of the city limits, except the portion in question which was not used during the period from 1878 to 1891. What was the effect of this disuse upon the rights of the city has not used during the part not used?

If an easement is acquired by deed, no length of time of mere non-user will operate to defeat or, impair the right. Washb. on Easements, (640:) Barlow vs. C. R. I. and P. R. Co., (29 Iowa, 281.) And in that case, where the right-of-way for a railroad had been fenced and used for agricultural purposes by the ownen of the servient tenement for consideration of which the company agreed to carry to the city in its pipes the water there needed for certain public purposes, and to pay 10 per cent. of the cost of maintaining the part of the ditch above the point where the pipes of the company were connected. It was also provided that the contract should not be construed to impose any obligation on the city to keep the ditch in repair. The water company was engaged in distributing water in pipes to the inhabitants of the city for domestic use, and it required water for this purpose in winter as well as in summer. The city used the ditch to carry irrigating water, which was needed only in the summer, and therefore did not keep up the ditch in winter. For this reason it was the custom the water company to assume entire control of the ditch in the winter. At the time the contract was made, the water was diverted from the river into this ditch at a point below the defendants land, and the part of the ditch now in dispute was not used at all. The heavy rains of December, 1889, deepened the channel of the river, so that the diversion could not be made below the line of the defendants land, and the water company made a new ditch extending into defendants land, and the water company made a few ditch extending into defendants land, but not including any part of the ditch now in dispute. The Providencia Company, then the owner of the land, objected to this, and in consequence thereof the water contract with would seem to dispose of any claim that they constitute an estoppel, or form a basis for any right against the city. The water company had no authority to represent or contract for the city in any capacity. It was the lessee of twenty inches of water to be taken from the ditch, but not the lessee of any ditch, or water right, above its point of diversion. And, even if it were the lessee of the ditch, it would have no authority as such to give away the property, or by its conduct to bar the city of its right thereto. Moreover, the contract to pay $5 a day did not refer to this ditch, nor was the ditch reopened in pursuance of that or any other contract. There does not appear to be any element in the case necessary to make an estoppel. The city is in no way involved in the correct water with contents. The deed was made in 1845, and appears to conform to the method of conveying real estate under the Mexican law then in force. The parties appeared before the alcalde, the conveyance was declared before him, and the attending witnesses, was entered by him in the book of public instruments, signed by the grantor, attested by the Alcalde and the witnesses, and a copy or duplicate duly certified, was thereupon Issued. No other formality was necessary to complete the grant. (White's Land Laws of California, p. 287, 299.) This copy of

would charge them with. None of the owners of the Providencia ever used the ground over which the ditch is built for any purpose inconsistent with its use as a ditch. On June 12, 1877, a complaint for an injunction was filed by the city against David Burbank, who was then the owner of the Providencia ranch. In that case an order was made on that day restraining the defendant, his agents, servants and privies from obstructing, diverting, or using any water flowing in the river or in the ditch, or in any way interfering with the rights of the plaintiff thereto, until the further order of the court. The case has not proceeded to final judgment and the order remains unrevoked.

When a servitude is acquired by adverse use, the disuse thereof for five years by the owner will extinguish it. (Civil Code, sec. 811.) The ditch was not used by the city, nor by any other person, from 1873 to 1881. Therefore, so far as the city had, or claimed, any title by prescription to the ditch, it has been lost by the non-user. In 1877 the ditch was enlarged so as to double its capacity. There does not appear to have been any grant of the right to so enlarge it. The additional space occupied by reason of this enlargement is occupied without right, and to that much thereof the city has no right or title.

It remains to consider the right to the

Washb on Easements, (640;) Barlow vs. C. R. I. and P. R. Co., (29 lowa, 281.)
And in that case, where the right-ofway for a railroad had been fenced and used for agricultural purposes by the owner of the servient tenement for thirteen years, it was said that there was "no use of the premises adverse to the defendant's right." See also Arnold vs. Stevens, (41 Mass. 110, 111;)

Mere non-user of a part of a right-ofway for a term of years does not abandon the portion not used, even though in the mean time it is used by the publie as a highway without objection.
Penn. R. R. Co. vs. Freeport, (20 Atl.
R., 940.)

Under the principles thus decided it seems clear that the non-user of this portion of the ditch, there being no intention to abandon it, and no adverse use, did not in any way affect the right or title vested in the Canal and Reservoir Company under the deed from De Is la Osa, nor the right of the plaintiff thereto as lesee of said company.

Some dscussion was had in regard to the right of the city under the lease at the present time, and particularly whether it is a tenant from year to year, or at will, or by sufferance. Upon reflection, I have concluded that this is an inquiry in which the defondants are not interested. There has been no surrender of the lease, nor of any part of the premises, The abandonment of a part of leased premises, while retaining possession of the remainder, will not operate as a surrender, but the continuance of the possession of a part will constitute a renewal, by implacation of the tenancy of the whole.
Dorr vs. Barney, (12 Hun. 262;) Schuyler vs. Smith (51, N. Y., 309.) If the Reservoir Company has a right to oust its tenant after due notice to quist, that is no concern of the defendants, They have no right to thrust themselves into that dispute. They are not in privity with the Reservoir Company, hor, on the contrary, the title of that company to the ditch is entirely independent of def on Oceager 3, 1845, Vicente de la Osa was the owner of the Providencia rancho, including the premises in question, and Maria Vyanacia Verdugo was the owner of all or a part of the I.os. certified, was thereupon issued. No other formality was necessary to complete the grant. (White's Land Laws of California, p. 297, 299.) This copy of duplicate was the document to be held by the grantee as evidence of the grant and of his title, and corresponds to the deed under our system. It is considered as a duplicate copy of the original, which is entered in the record, and possesses like force as evidence. Donner vs. Palmer, (31 Cal. 510-513.) It is true it is not acknowledged as now required by law but it was duly authenticated in the manner required by law in force at the time of its execution, and it is a valid conveyance of land, and not a mere copy. Sec. 1207 civil code, is therefore applicable to this record. That section provides that any instrument affecting real property which was, previous to January 30, 1873, copied into the proper record in any county recorder's office shall be deemed to impart, after that date, notice of its contents to subsequent purchasers, notwithstanding the absence of any certificate of acknowledgement.

The defendants also had notice because of the fact that the old ditch was plainly visible on the ground all the time, and this was sufficient to put them on inquiry. There is a serious question whether or not the restraining order in the case against Burbank operated upon the defendants as constructive notice. It is directed to David Burbank and his "privies" which would include the defendants, who are his privies in estate. No list pendens notice was filed in the action as required by sec. 49, C. C. P., and therefore subsequent purchasers are not charged with notice of "the pendency of the action." But an order of injunction is something more than a pending action. It is an interlocutory degree, and has something of the force and effect of a judgment. But, as the appearance of the ditch and the record of the deed were sufficient notice, it is not necessary to decide this question.

The defendants also claim that the city is estopped from claiming both

In the decision of the Supreme Court which settled the case of Wheeler vs. Donnell there was a slight misstatement which might be interpreted to mean that the District Attorney was allowed to retain his position through the technicality of the case being outside the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court. Travel Made Dangerous by Piles of Brick, Lumber and Mortar-No Regard for Public Convenience. A Few Exceptions.

Numerous collisions have taken place of late between horse conveyances and street cars. This fact is due to a large extent to the piles of building material which block the streets in the principal parts of the city. The natural wealth of the United States is so immense and apparently inexhaustible that the inhabitants of this country have juite naturally dropped into a very wasteful and extravagant way of dealing with the bounties with which nature has provided them. Not only have millions of acres of land been given away by the government to corporations for a song, but the people themselves have been equally reckless in handling the nimate and inanimate products of the land, acting as if such things would last for ever. The vast tracts of timber, teeming myriads of fish in the waters, and the animal life which once in countless herds over the tern plains have all been sacrificed this ruthless spirit of wanton deuntil now the time is ap ching when it will be absolutely ary to call a halt. The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad and the Kansas Pacific were now constructed through the heart of the range, and but little else was done in this region during the years 1871-74 except buffalo killing. The rush to the range has been likened to that of the California mines in earlier years. Merchants located along the lines of these railroads and built up an immese business outfitting the slaughter parties and handling the products. It was no funcommon thing for one man

to bring in two barrels of salted tongues at a time, not a pound of meat or a solitary robe. This wanton killing reached its height in 1873, when one/railroad brought out 250,000 robes, 2.000,000 pounds of meat and 300,000 pounds of bones. Col. Dodge says that one robe sent to market then might represent five buffaloes-such was the want of knowledge and skill in shooting the animals and curing their robe The final destruction of the northern herd began with the building of the Northern Pacific Railroad in 1881-'82. The range was then between the valley of the Platte and the Great Slave Lake, and the herds were most abundant along the central portion of this region. Prior to this time, for some fifty years, the annual output of robes from this region had varied from 50,000 to 100,000.

The year 1881 witnessed a similar rush of hide-hunters to the northern range that had occurred ten years be fore in the southern. At that time robes were worth three times as much as when the southern herd was de stroyed, and the hunters were sure of a rich reward as long as the buffaloes lasted. This herd was then estimated at 1,000,000. As late as 1883 asherd of 75,000 crossed the Yellowstone a few miles from Fort Keogh, with scores of Indians, pot-hunters and white butchers at their heels, bound for a harbor of safety in the Dominion of Canada, but not 5000 of this mighty host lived to reach the British border Unquestionably that region yielded an immense number of robes, as attested by the thousands of tons of bones more ecently gathered there.

The same brutal methods were pursued to kill off this herd as were employed against the southern herd. But the product was a much larger proportion of robes to animals killed o the hunter $3. Mr. Smith of Mon tana killed 107 from one stand in one hour's time, in the Red Water country, 109 miles northeast of Miles City, and

"At the beginning of the hunting season of 1883, the herd contained 10,000 head and was located between the Black Hills and Bismarck. Smith was in at the death, and says by Octo-ber the herd was reduced to 1200, when Sitting Bull's band arrived at Standing Rock Agency and in two days' time silled the entire herd. He says killed the entire herd. He says: When we got through the hunt there was not a hoof left. That wound up the buffalo of the far West. For a long time there were rumors that the herd had only gone north and would eventually return in force. But as sea-son after season passed without the appearance of an animal or informa-tion of the existence of the herd in Canada wilds, the American buffalo butcher sought other means of liveli-hood, and, let us hope, less question-

"There may be a very few buffaloes yet in a wild state, but the nearer the species approach complete extermination the more eagerly are the lonely fugitives pursued to death. The largest number now known to exist is the entire that the state of the sta

Seldom has such a ruthless and wanton destruction of animal life been recorded as this. Unless the varie tate governments lose no time in passing adequate laws, the elk, the leer and all other large wild animals of this country will soon be known only as curiosities.

OUR DEMAND OBLIGATIONS.

"Why Legal-tender Notes Must Go" is the title of an article by Charles C. ackson, in the last issue of Sound Currency, a semi-monthly publication printed in New York and devoted to financial questions. The article is an interesting and timely discussion of the subject of greenback retirement. Whether the reader agrees with Mr. Jackson's conclusions or not, he will read his arguments with interest, be-cause of the writer's manifest candor and his evident familiarity with the subject of which he treats.

The writer points out with some minuteness the tremendous expense of the government's continuing to reissue only hope of financial salvation lies in the retirement and cancellation of the legal-tender notes, the Sherman treasury notes, and the silver certificates. The fact that the law provides for the redemption of the latter in silver he regards as of little moment since the government is pledged to maintain the silver coins at a parity with gold, which makes these coins virtually redeemable in gold.

Mr. Jackson says that the contracts payable in lawful money in this country amount to not less than $25,000,000, and that the fear that the standard of our lawful money may be degraded "paralyzes our energies, curtails our industries, and lessens our incomes very seriously." He declares, further that "in the last panic year the ag gregate of the incomes of our inhabitants was reduced probably 20 per cent, at least, and today our incomes are probably 10 per cent. less than they would be if this fear of partial repudiation did not hang over us. The total incomes of our people are some where about $12,000,000,000 per year and 10 per cent. of this is $1,200,000, 000. This is the sum, then, which the use of overvalued silver and untrust worthy legal-tender paper as standard money takes from us each year." Mr. Jackson undoubtedly exaggerates the loss of income from this source. Con tracts can be made payable in gold and many are so made. Until very re cently "the fear of partial repudia tion" has been so slight as not to be worth taking into account: and ever under existing conditions this fear is not sufficiently in evidence to produc the serious results claimed, for there is scarcely a remote possibility that the free-coinage extremists can secure the realization of their impracticable theories. The worst that they can do is to retard necessary legislation, thus harassing the business interests of the country and preventing the complete

Gold has been flowing away from our country during the past eight years, Mr Jackson says, "because our government has so abused its power to issue paper currency that both our own and foreign investors are doubtful whether that currency will be always been growing with the decline in value of our large stock of silver, all of which s practically redeemable in gold, with no adequate gold reserve to meet such an obligation. There is plenty of gold in the world, and the natural laws of trade will quickly start it to flowing our way, once we fully decide to stick to the gold standard."

With President Cleveland, Mr. Jack-

son thinks that the government should go entirely out of the business of issuing paper money, and he points out that our banks, with assets aggregating some $5,000,000,000, are better fitted to issue currency than is our government, which has practically no assets and which in times of stringency or emergency can obtain gold only by selling its own promises to pay. resources of this country are so great that it has succeeded thus far in keepowing to less wasteful methods of ing its legal-tender notes at par with killing and curing. Robes then brought | gold, though similar experiments tried failed. On this point the writer says "We have done wonders with our government paper, having restored its redeemability after, in the stress of war, it had once been irredeemable. But we have since then followed in the course of other nations by increasing the quantity of the notes (contrary to everybody's confident expectation and intention) from $350,000,000 to $836,000,000, and we have now got to the point where a little preference for gold is indicated by the way it goes out of the treasury in return for paper and silver

"We know that most, and perhaps all, nations that have used paper money at all, have tried our experiment of at all, have tried our experiment of using as legal-tender currency demand notes on which the government is the promissor. These notes have always been defaulted. No such paper except ours is at par today in the whole world. All the intelligent nations have abandoned the effort and substituted metal as the only legal-tender, and now have all their paper issued by banks. The Bank of England notes form no exception to the rule. They are so guarded as to be similar to gold. oans. The Bank of England notes form no exception to the rule. They are so guarded as to be similar to gold certificates rather than notes. They are certificates rather than notes. They are not legal-tender by the bank to pay its debts in any case, and they utterly cease to be legal-tender for any purpose by anybody whenever their convertibility into gold on demand ceases; so that their fall below par does not affect the value of contracts to pay lawful money. Of course, too, these notes are issued by a powerful bank, with huge capital and deposits—not by a government treasury which has neither capital or deposits. It is certain, therefore, that we are using an antiquated and discredited form of currency and are neglecting the clearest rency and are neglecting the clearer and strongest warnings of experience."

Whether the demand notes of the government should all be retired per manently is a question upon which diametrically differing opinions are entertained by able financiers. But fer men of intelligence who have studied our financial system will deny that the legal-tenders and treasury notes, as governed by existing laws, constitute a serious menace to the stability of our currency. That provision of the law which requires these notes to be paid out again and again, as often as

Now that the city's rights in the premises have been judicially defined, we can go on and lay the foundation for a complete water works plant.

ENGLAND'S TRIUMPH.

The Great Benefits She Has Derive from the Gorman-Wilson Tariff. from the Gorman-Wilson Tariff.

(American Economist:) Last week we received by special cable, and published in the American Economist, the total value of the exports of woolen goods from Bradford up to December 31, 1895, the first complete year of our experience in actual free trade in wool. The result confirmed whatevery Protectionits anticipated and proclaimed. Our free trade was of more benefit to English than to American manufacturers. Bradford shipped us woolen goods worth £5,701,242. This was an increase of £3,473,649 over and above the annual shipments during the full Mc-Kinley tariff period from 1891 to 1894. American free trade in wool benefited Bradford to the extent of an additional $17,000,000 in a single year.

Our experiment with free trade in wool for one year has enabled English manufacturers of yarns, woolen and worsteds to sell more than four times as much of their goods as they did in 1894, and 150 per cent. more than their average annual sales during the entire protection period from 1891 to 1894 inclusive. So much for the boon of free raw material to our woolen manufacturers.

Now, as to wool, the United Kingdom sent us in 1895, over 150 per cent.

Now, as to wool, the United Kingdom sent us, in 1895, over 150 per cent.

more English, foreign and colonial wool than in 1894, the increase in values being $14,000,000. Compared with the entire McKiniey protection period, 1891 to 1894, inclusive, this increased value of wool sent here last year was almost 1,000,000—that amount more money tken away from American farmers hile our manufacturers lost trade orth $19,000,000 additional.

Never within thirty years have we imported into the United States, from all countries, as much wool as was sent us from the United Kingdom alone last year, and we have yet to learn the value of our wool imports that last year, and we have yet to learn the value of our wool imports that were shipped directly to this country from Australia and South America. Then we must take cognizance of the shrinkage in the price of wool, as compared with the McKinley period, that our farmers did sell, before we can arrive at any correct idea of the entire losses inflicted upon American sheep-farmers by one year's policy of Democratic free trade which, it was intended, should be a robbery of the many farmers for the benefit of the few manufacturers. The Democratic scheme was partly successful. It has robbed the farmers; but it has failed to be of any benefit to the manufacturers. It has robbed the farmers; that it has failed to be of any benefit to the manufacturers. It has robbed them, too.

The United Kingdom shipped to this country, last year, more woolen tissues than in 1891 and 1892 combined, and more than in the three years of 1992, 1893 and 1894 combined; more than twice the quantity shipped in 1891 or 1892; three times as much as in 1893, and considerably more than four times as much as in 1894.

As to worsted tissues, the United siderably more than four times as much as in 1894.

As to worsted tissues, the United Kingdom sent us, last year, almost as much as in 1891 and 1892 combined, more than as much as in 1892 and 1893, and almost four times as much as in 1894. Of yarns she sent us 50 per cent. more than in all four McKinley tariff years.

We have to go back to 1873 before we find that the United Kingdom made us such large shipments of her weolen manufactures. In 1890 the output of our domestic woolen factories and our imports of foreign woolen goods together were worth a total of $380,000, 000. Last year the United Kingdom sent, us woolens worth $32,000,000. To this we must add the imports from France and Germany which will probably aggregate $30,000,000 for the year, the combined shipments of the two countries having averaged $20,000,000 a year for ten years past. This will give us a total of $60,000,000 worth of foreign woolens imported under the first year of free trade in wool. It must have reduced the output of our own factories, last year, below their output of $383,000,000 when the census was taken in 1889. If not, then there must be some very large stocks of woolen goods unsold, either in the must be some very large stocks of woolen goods unsold, either in the hands of our manufacturers, of the im-porters or of the wholesale and retail

Miss Elliott, when she saw him, remarked:

"The Sultan is the most wretched pinched-up little soverign I ever saw, A most unhappy-looking man, of dark complexion, with a look of absolute terror in his large eastern eyes. People say he is nervous, and no wonder, yet this is to be regretted, for if he could surmount these fears, his would be an agreeable and refined countenance, eminently Asiatic in type, and with a certain charm of expression. All I can say is that his eyes haunted me for days, as of one gazing at some unknown horror, so emaciated and unnatural is his appearance that were he a European we should pronounce him in a swift decline. I hear that his greatest friend and favorite is his physician. And no wonder, for he must need his constant care, considering the he leads. How all, the fabled state of the Oriental potentiate palls before such a lesson in royal misery! The poorest beggar in his dominions is happler than he!"

PUT YOURSELF IN HIS PLACE

Abdul Hamid, the Hard-worked Sovereign of Tarkey.

(From "Abdul Hamid, Sultan of Turkey A Character Sketch." by W. T. Stead, in the January Review of Reviews.) Henceforth the Sultan was to be the Sultan. And for nearly tyenty years Abdul Hamid has been the Sultan and no mistake. Believing in no one but himself, he trusted no one but himself. Surrounded by men who had betrayed his uncle and his brother, living in an atmosphere maiarious with corruption, and saturated with intrigue, he early decided to trust no one, and to govern single-handed. And hopeless though the enterprise appeared, Abdul Hamid may at least claim that whatever may be said in criticism of his policy, it has at least achieved one great and indisputable success. It has enabled him to survive. And that is more than most people believed possible. Not only has he survived for twenty years, but he has, until quite recently, been regarded as one of the ablest and most successful rulers of our time.

The worst enemy of Abdul Hamid cannot deny that he is one of the most industrious of sovereigns. He tolis early and late, seventeen and eighteen hours a day. Neither can it be imputed to him that he has not always labored for what he believed to be the real interest of the great trust which Allah has committed to his hands. He has worked like a galley-slave in the peopled solitude of his palace. An imperial convict sentenced to hard labor for life, with constant liability to capital punishment, he has scorned delights and lived laborious days. He is not a genius, but he has held his own; not a hero, but he has beron the heat and burden of a long and tollosme day without complaining, and if he were gathered to his fathers tomorrow, he would have a record of which, when due allowance is made for his environment, no Sultan of his time need be ashamed.

Miss Elilott, when she saw him, remarked:

The Sultan is the most wretched.

It is not stated whether the so-called "Caffornia River and Harbor Improvement Association" which recently met in San Francisco, has any connection with the recently defunct Haif Million Club, but its objects appear to be about the same, judging from the fact that no reference was made to any improvement except that of rivers tributary to San Francisco. San Francisco people cannot be surprised that Southern Californians do not extend them more sympathy while they exhibit such a narrow-minded, local spirit. It becomes more evident every year that the southern counties will have to Baddie their own cance, as far as getting anything from the government is concerned.

The Arizona railway mail service used to be as badly hampered by lack of men as is the Los Angeles postoffice at present. But the authorities have at last realized the Territory's needs in this respect, and within the last seven momths the number of railway postal clerks has been more than doubled. Every appointment is finade under civil service rules, and the work is excellently planned and carried out. Arizona is a part of the division of which Los Angeles is the center. William Guy of Nogales, Ariz., has just received an appointment as railway postal clerk. Klyde A. Kegeris of Chino is a second new appointee.

RATES FOR BAPTISTS.

CHICAGO, Jan. 18.—A ruling was handed down by Chairman Caldwell today to the effect that the rate of $60 agreed to west of the eastern gateways of the transcontinental lines, for the Baptist anniversary to be held at Portland, Or., next May, will be available only from Duluth, St. Paul, Minneapolls, Missouri points and other gateways. It will not apply from St. Louis, Memphis, New Orleans, and moreover those points are not included in the territory from which the regular one-way thirty-day first-class tickets are to be sold.

The committee of the New York Mining Exchange which has been making an effort to secure reduced rates from Denver to New York on the occasion of the opening of the Mining Exchange in the latter city, has falled in its endeavor. The Transmissouri and West-ern Passenger Association roads had agreed to make low rates if the lines east of Chicago would do the same. The latter, however, would not agree and the plan of the committee, which was to run a special train from Denver to New York for the opening, has been given up.

ver to New York for the opening, has been given up.

The complication between the lines in Colorado shows no sign of settlement. The Union Pacific, Denver and Gulf has over 700 tickets in the hands of brokers, and the counting of them up is more than it cares to assume. It has again asked the Atchison and the Denver and Rio Grande, which it claims are equally interested with itself in the maintenance of rates in Colorado, to ald in closing the market, but both lines have flatly declined. They say that they had no hand in placing the tickets with the brokers, and that it is none of their business to take them out.

THE SIBERIAN ROAD.

ST. LOUIS, (Mo.,) Jan. 18.—The Republic publishes the following: "Primary steps will be taken today looking to the organization of a syndicate of St. Louis capitalists for the purpose of constructing a portion of the great railroad project across Siberla from the Russian border to the Pacific coast, a distance of 5000 miles. M. S. Carter & Co., R. M. Quigley & Co. and B. A. Aldrich are the St. Louis people interested in the venture. Monroe & Lee of Lawrence, Kas., are also in the deal. Mr. Aldrich is the general agent for the Kibourne & Jacobs Manufacturing Company, of Columbus, O. and is interested is rigely in railroad building. The formation of the syndicate was the outcome of the arrival in St. Louis yesterday of a man who registered at the Planter's Hotel as "R. E. de Saviner, railroad contractor, San Francisco."

Mr. Saviner, as he says he prefers to be called, has a contract for building a portion of the line, and is on his way to Paris to interest French capitalists in the scheme. The Russian government is behind the road, and it is with the Russian government the St. Louis men will have to deal in making the contract. M. Saviner is the Count de Toulouse Laufree. PAVED ALLEYS.

Property-owners Awakening to the Necessity of Them.

Now that it has been decided by the property-owners to pave the alley orth of Colorado street between Ray nd and Fair Oaks avenues asphaltum, and so gutter the center that the water which now stands in the alley to the depth of several inches in places will run off, the business men occupying the stores and offices abutting on the alley just south of Colorado, between Fair Oaks and Raymond, are advocating paving them. The recent rains have made both alleys almost impassable. Mud and water do not dry up quickly in those especial alleys, because they are shaded from the rays of the sun by the buildings, and those who are obliged to pass through them complain bitterly of their condition. When the roads are dry and in good condition, these alleys are apt to be muddy, and are not only unsightly, uncomfortable and a nuisance, but the business men who are interested in downtown property. the alley to the depth of several inches are interested in downtown property, say that the condition of the alleys is say that the condition of the alleys is a real detriment to the property. Those interested in paving the two alleys mentioned declare that strang-ers who come to Pasadena are in-clined to think that in spite of urban camed to tunk that it spite of urban aspirations, this community is rather countrified to permit the existence of such a state of things in the alleys in the heart of the business section. In the paving of the Carleton alley, the use of asphaltum of a depth of an use of asphaltum of a depth of an inch and a half is contemplated, the gutters to be of the same material, and horses are not to be permitted to stand any length of time on the pavement. The work is to be done by private contract, as soon as the contractors, who are now at work on Raymond avenue, are able to begin it. The rain, while it has interfered with the work of paving, has not ben sufficient to stop the laying of the water and sewer pipe, necessitated by the improvement.

The matter of meat inspection, which was urgently recommended in the petition presented to the City Council by the committee from the Shakespeare Club, was taken up, and it was decided that the Supervisors be memorialized to appoint a competent inspector for all animals slaughtered for the Los Angeles and Passadone markets; the inner the animals slaughtered for the Los Angeles and Pasadena markets, the inspection to include only the large abattoirs, whereby by far the most of the meat for the local market is prepared. The subject of scarlet fever was considered, and the two physicians present were inclined to consider the disease scarlatina, and while it was decided to placard all houses, quarantining infected houses was deemed unnecessary, as the disease is said to be in an exceedingly mild form, and not properly scarlet fever at all, but scarlatina. Fourteen cases were recently reported by Superintendent Graham, but the Board of Health decided that there were but twelve cases. The isolation of the nurses caring for them was recommended.

REDLANDS, Jan. 18 .- (Regular Correspondence.) At its session last even-ing the Committee on Transportation reported to the Junior Mechanics that ing the Committee on Transportation reported to the Junior Mechanics that the railroads were willing to give half-fare rates from all points in Southern California for the celebration of Washington's birthday, and the two railroad companies would each pledge 500 excursionists from Los Angeles. They feared that if half rates were made from all points the town would be swamped. As the council desires to invite the councils of the order in Southern California to participate in the event, it was decided to take chances on being swamped and ask excursion rates from all points. The Chamber of Commerce has appointed a committee to cooperate with the Juniors, and it is thought provision can be made to care for several thousand visitors. Redlands Friday evening scored another success in amateur theatricals. "The Governess" was presented at the Academy of Music for the benefit of the Cycling Club. CO-OPERATIVE TRADE SOCIE-TIES. Coöperative societies are nu-merous in Great Britain, and appear to have been more successful there than have been more successful there than in any other country.

According to an article on the subject of cooperation in Great. Britain in a recent number of the Atlantic Monthly there are at present two great cooperative wholesale societies, one for England and one for Scotland, which are so much more important and extensive than any other that a consideration of them is practically a discussion of the whole field. Of these, the English society withholds from the workers a share in the profits and the Scotch society allows him this share. The figures and other facts relating to the English society are given in the following paragraphs:

"The present coöperative wholesale

the English society are given in the following paragraphs:

"The present coöperative wholesale society, limited, was founded in 1863, as the North of England Coöperative Wholesale Society, Limited. For nearly ten years it confined itself to the business of purchasing articles wholesale and selling them retail to coöperative societies and companies, whether members or not, at a small profit, which is divided half-yearly among all customer societies in proportion to their purchases, mere customers receiving only half dividends, customer members whole. Its sales in 1865 (the first complete year of its working) were £120,754. In 1872 there had reached £1,153,132. The society now began to turn its attention to production, purchasing some biscuit works, and starting in Lelcester a boot factory in 1873, then soap works in 1874, other boot works at Heckmondwike in 1880. Leather-currying was entered on in 1886, a woolen mill taken over in 1887, ready-made clothing department in 1888 (clothing having been already made up in two branches as an adjunct to the woolen cloth and drapery departments;) a corn mill was opened in 1891, jam-making entered on in 1892, and a printing department undertaken, besides building department undertaken, besides building department in the society's three English branches—Manchester, London and Newcastle; there is also a branch at New York.) departments in the society's three English branches—Manchester, London and Newcastle; there is also a branch at New York.) In addition to these there is a shipping department, the society having quite a little fleet of its own. During the quarter ending on June 30, 1894, the society purchased a factory at Leeds for the manufacture of ready-made clothing.

"The success of the society as a whole has been prodigious. Its busines in the distributive departments during the last quarter, ended June 30, was £2,272,946, or at the rate of upward of £9,000,000 a year, making it one of the largest commercial establishments in the world; although the quarter's business was 1 per cent. less than in the corresponding one of last year, and the profits were nearly 18 per cent. less. In its manufacturing departments the sales amounted for the quarter to £196,407, or at the rate of nearly £800,000 a year, an increase of not far from 12 per cent. on last year. But the society has not been uniformly successful in its ventures upon the field of production, and a considerable loss incurred in the workings of its fiour mill has reduced the net profits of the quarter by over 79 per cent. on last year.

MORE FALSE STATEMENTS. Here MORE FALSE STATEMENTS. Here is an instance showing how quickly bad news travels. It would be matter for regret even if the statements made were true, but it is the more regretable from the fact that the statements are not correct. In bold headlines, the Philadelphia Grocery World, in its issue of January 6, prints:

"California orange crop said to be ruined," and then proceeds to say: "Information has come to a prominent fruit dealer of this city that the temperature ruling in California during the last few days has been so low as to probably ruin the coming crop of or-the last few days has been so low as to probably ruin the coming crop of or-anges. It was stated that the mercury at Redlands was but 18 deg. above zero, while at Riverside it marked but 24 deg. Both of these cities are in the center of the prosperous orange-grow-center of the prosperous orange-growing district of California, and even lower temperature is prophesied for those sections."

The true facts are that Redlands district has been very lightly touch a fact.

those sections."

The true facts are that Redlands district has been very lightly touched by frost, certainly not to the degree stated in the Grocery World of 14 deg. below freezing point. The Redlands orange crop may be said to be not injured at all. This fact, full examination having been made, is well-known here.

The Grocery World then goes on to say: "There was, of course, no way of verifying this statement, but as it came from thoroughly reliable sources, it may be accepted until contradicted. Even without the California oranges, it is probable that there would be a sufficient supply from Jamaica and the Mediterranean to supply the bulk of the demand; but unquestionably prices will be considerably higher if the California fruit is not a factor in the market, as the three varieties of oranges work against each other to the end that prices are lowered all along the line.

"While the appearance of the Caliline.

"While the appearance of the California oranges will not be affected by the abstraction of the juice, they will be very much lighter in weight, and their inferiority can easily be detected by the average consumer. In this way their inferiority can easily be detected by the average consumer. In this way the trade in California oranges, no matter how many of them are brought to Eastern markets, will be very seri-ously interfered with."

The fine Italian hand of the Eastern foreign fruit importers is apparent in these, and other like, statements.

MAPLE SYRUP FROM CORN COBS.
Eastern trade papers are having a good deal to say about the discovery of making maple syrup, that is to say, something that looks and tastes like maple syrup, out of corn cobs. It is the discovery of an Illinois farmer, who undertook to reduce a lot of corn-cobs to pulp for feed, by boiling them in water. Noticing the liquid seemed to thicken, he tasted, and was impressed by the similarity of the taste of that of maple syrup. The product was submitted to experts, who pronounced it equal to the maple product. The required color is given by adding a certain quantity of burned brown sugar. If these facts are correctly stated, there is never likely to be a scarcity of "maple syrup" on the market, and it may happen that the cob of the corn will eventualy prove of more value than the corn itself.

GENERAL BUSINESS TOPICS. GENERAL RUSINESS TOPICS.

BEET-SUGAR IN NEBRASKA. It is not only at Chino that the beet-growers are at loggerheads with the Oxnards. The growers in the neighborhood of Fremont, Neb., where the Oxnards have a factory, are all stirred up, and are preparing to bring suit to enjoin the payment of the State bounty to the Oxnards. The growers claim the oxnards. The growers claim the oxnards. The growers claim the oxnards.

that they have not been allowed living prices. One man says he received $6.38 for nearly twenty-two tons of beets, the company charging him extra for unloading, and another grower says he only received $21 for three cars of beets. The dissatisfaction among the growers has become so general that early next month a State convention of growers will be held for mutual protection.

growers will be held for mutual protection.

According to the complaints made by the Nebraska beet-raisers, the Oxnards have acted there very much in the same manner as they are charged with having acted at Chino. The farmers say that hundreds of persons were induced to plant beets by promises of good prices therefor. They claim that the chemists in the employ of the Oxnards defraud the growers in their analysis of the beets. The same charge has been inade by growers at Chino.

To say the least, the Oxnards appear to be uniformly unfortunate with the farmers from whom they secure their supply of raw material. As such circumstances do not prevail at the other factories in the State, it is only fair to suppose that the fault lies chiefly with the manufacturers, not with the industry.

STREET RAILWAYS. The development of street-railway systems in the United States during the past few years has been remarkable. According to the Street Railway Journal there are in the United States 13,583 miles of street railways. The capital stock of the companies amounts to $748,014,206, and the bonds issued on street-railway property amount to $552,125,505, making a total capitalization of $1,300,136,711, or nearly $100,000 per mile.

It is a remarkable fact that of these 13,583 miles 10,363 miles are already operated by electricity, although it is scarcely a decade since electricity was introduced as a motive power. This shows that street-railway companies are fully up to the progress of the age, and, incidentally, proves that manufacturers of electrical machinery are active in pushing their product. Only 1914 miles are still left to the horse as a motive power, and 632 miles to the cable. Steam is used on 679 miles of track, but in the States of Delaware and Idaho every mile of street railway is operated by electricity. No horses are now used in this service in Vermont, Montana and Utah, and Rhode Island has only three miles of horse, railroads remaining. The State of mont, Montana and Utah, and Rhode Island has only three miles of horse, railroads remaining. The State of Mississippi has only 23 miles of street railway, and 21 miles of this are operated by mule power.

California has the most cable road—160 miles—as well as 205 miles of horse roads and 317 of electric roads. Our relative position is first in cable roads, third in horse roads, eighth in electric roads, and fifth in capitalization. We also stand eighth in the number of cars run.

also stand eighth in the number of cars run.

California has the distinction of being the first State in which a cable road was utilized for street-car service, that system having been invented and used by A. S. Halladie of San Francisco. It is, however, a fact of which many people are not aware, that one of the earliest attempts to operate a steam railroad was under the cable system. This was a road from London to Blackwall, in which the cars were hauled by a stationary engine connected with an averagening cable. We have seen some RICH ORE. Morgan & Co., the assayers, report that they have just assayed a sample of gold-bearing quartz from a San Bernardino county mine which yielded at the rate of nearly $17,000 a ton. Mining men understand that such high assays do not mean much, unless the amount of ore in sight is known. It is easy to pick out a small piece of ore from almost any mine that will give astonishing results. At the same time, it is a fact that mine that will give astonishing results. At the same time, it is a fact that there are mines in Southern California of remarkable richness, and as The Times has frequently stated, if these properties were located in any other section they would have created a big excitemnt long ago. However, there is little doubt that Southern California will witness something like a mining boom during the present year.

PRODUCTION OF PRECIOUS MET-ALS. A circular has been received from Wells-Fargo & Co., the main points of which have been reported by telegraph. The circular contains the annual report The circular contains the annual report of precious metals produced in the States and Territories west of the Missouri River (including British Columbia) during 1895, which shows in the aggregate: Gold, $48,667,383; silver, $35,274,777; copper, $27,052,115; lead, $7,170,387. Total gross result, $118,164,642. The "commercial" value at which the several metals named herein have been estimated is: Silver, 65 cents per ounce; copper, 11 cents per pound, and lead, $3,25 per hundredweight.

California and Colorado show up about even in the shipments of gold. In silver, Colorado is far ahead in the shipment of ore builton, although Montana takes the lead in the shipment, of ores, and base builton by freight. From tana takes the lead in the shipment of ores, and base bullion by freight. From present indications the year 1896 will show a remarkable increase in the total gold product of the country. It is not improbable that the figures of 1895 will be doubled. The production of gold last year was the largest of any year since 1870, figures for which are given in the circular. The output has been increasing since 1892, and has increased with slight variations since 1888.

NEW YORK MARKETS.

Shares and Money.

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.-The- stock market today opened irregular, but al-most at the outset a heavy tone was apparent and general weakness quickly leveloped. The arguments advanced against prices were the familiar ones of uncertainty regarding the immediate financial and political outlook. The bear professional fully approved the bear professional fully approved the misunderstanding prevailing until after the close of business regarding the alleged destination of the British flying squadron for American waters. Gloomy forecasts as to the business outlook for the granger properties were also circulated. The selling movement was well distributed and material net losses were scored. The final prices were at about the lowest of the day. Speculation for the week has been dominated by sensitiveness on the part of invest-

The Associated Banks.

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—The Financial this week says that the statement of the associated banks of New York city for the week ending January 18 reflects the contraction which has been going on for the past months, and incidentally the preparations which are being made to meet the new bond issue. Money continues to flow to this center without interruption, and the movement resulted in a gain of over $5,000,000 for the week first ended. The advance in exchanges at several Western points is an indication that New York funds are in strongers demand. The liquidation which has resulted in the past months, or since the first noticeable effect of the Venezuelan scare, may be estimated when it is stated that the contraction in loans of the New York Chearing-house banks has been fully $45,683,000, and the total is now the lowest since the previous panie. The gain in cash as reported in the statement for the week was $5,-466,200. It has been generally assumed as an inevitable result of the bond loan, that a stringency in the money market would occur in the next month, but a prominent New York president received a telegram a day or two since from Secretary Carlisle, in which the latter gave assurances that not the slightest fear need be felt in that regard, and that the treasury would exercise its utmost power and authority to prevent such a contingency.

CHICAGO, Jan. 18.—Wheat was decidedly the leader today, interest in provisions having died away to a considerable extent. The temper of the wheat market was a very uncertain one at first, however, for after a sudden spurt at the opening from 60 1-8 for May, up to 60%, it hung back and fell again to 60% before an hour of the session had passed. The business was largely local, but there was some buying orders from St. Louis, as the price was going up, and 60% 60% cwas realized. The New York selling orders and the letting-go of considerable lines of long wheat by the local bulls brought about the reaction referred to above, but the market absorbed all the wheat offered during the decline, and was again up to 60% by 11 o'clock. The second bulge did not stop until 60% 60% had been paid, and after that experience the short sellers showed a disposition to act with more circumspection than they did on the first rise. The market got its chief strength from the growing apprehension that the situation was on the way to this country caused an alarm among shorts, and there was active covering and good investment buying, while there was not much wheat for sale. The damp, rainy weather in this section, and the cold wave following closely upon it caused some apprehension of damage, and was also an important element in creating the bullish feeling, which became so universal in the last hour of the session. The price here rose to 61 cents about twenty minutes from the close, and was still bringing 60% when the closing bell sounded. A heavy business was done. Corn was fairly active and firm in spite of the lower provision market. In oats the feeling was firm in sympathy with wheat and corn. Thus leading futures closed as follows:

UMPRISONMENT FOR PASSING FRAUDULENT DRAFT.

The Court Remembered Hadley's Ill Health and Previous Good Char-acter—Wants His Money Back Again—Raised the Fing on Mount

SAN BERNARDINO, Jan. 17.—(Regular Correspondence.) The trial of W. S. Hadley on the charge of getting a fraudulent draft cashed culminated today in his sentence to imprisonment for fifteen months. The jury, after forty-six hours' deliberation, recommended the extreme mercy of the court. The court took into consideration his physical condition and previous good character in fixing the sentence. Word has been recived from Pres-lent Lloyd of the San Bernardino ident Lloyd of the San Bernardino Electric Light Company that he has purchased the entire plant of the Electric Light and Power Company. This includes the plant at East Riverside and lines to this city and along the streets, together with the incandescent plant on C street. This will give the San Bernardino Electric Light Company ample power to meet its contract with the city to light the public streets for the ensuing year, and will increase its capacity to furnish light to private houses. The contract to furnish light to the city is drawn and ready to be signed.

THE NEVADA SOUTHERN.
A telegram from San Diego announces that W. H. Carlson of that city has purchased of I. E. Blake his interest in the Nevada Southern Railway. The road is forty miles long, running from Blake station, on the line of the Atlantic and Pacific, to Manvel. No deed of such transfer has been recorded here, but instead the County Recorder has received a telegram from Carlson remitting $1 for recorder's fees, but no deed has arrived. Not long since the road was sold at a receiver's sale for $150,000, to pay its debts. Any sale of the road must be made subject to the amount of the sale. It is rumored the sale to Carlson is in the interests of the Southern Pacific and the line from Utah to San Diego.

SAN DIEGO COUNTY.

Mayor Carlson Again Enveloped in a Veil of Mystery.

SAN DIEGO, Jan. 18.—(Regular Correspondence.) His Honor, the Mayor, Little Billee Carlson, again throws about himself a fog of mystery concerning railroad matters by simply refusing to talk. The potency of keeping one's mouth shut is realized by Little Billee, and he keeps almost as mum as one's mouth shut is realized by Little Billee, and he keeps almost as mum as a clam. The cause of all this fog is the filing of a deed conveying to William H. Carlson, as trustee, the entire Nevada Southern Railway Company's system, from roadbed to rolling-stock. The road is forty miles long, extending from Blake, near The Needles, on the Atlantic and Pacific, to Manvel, toward Salt Lake. The deed was signed by Isaac E. Blake, in New York, on January 9, and is now on file in San Bernardino county. From the terminus of the Nevada Southern, at Vanvel, to the Union Pacific terminus at Milford, Utah, is 250 miles. Part of this route has been graded. A partial survey of the road through San Bernardino county has been made. It is believed that the Rio Grande Railway officials also want a Pacific Coast outlet. Gen. D. C. Dodge, the president, and Passenger Agent Babcock visited the Coast a few months ago to look over the country. It is reported that Gen. Dodge gave out information on returning to Salt Lake that his company would begin building toward Southern California this spring. In certain quarters here it is believed that Carlson acts as the figure-head for the Southern Pacific, although to others it seems incomprehensible that Huntington shouldsemploy the proprietor of five newspapers, president of two inoperative railroads, etc., as his agent. Yet when Stephen T. Gage was here a few weeks ago, he held a close consultation with Little Billee. If Souhtern California ships 10,000 carloads of oranges this year it means $3,000,000 freight for refuses to answer questions. He says that during a period about the time the murders were committed his mind was a blank. The man utters further contradictory statements in opposition to abundantly proven testimony. The case will occupy a part of next week, or nearly three weeks in all. Billee, and he keeps almost as mum as a clam. The cause of all this fog is miar Correspondence.) A man giving his mame as Jim Howard was arrested this morning on the charge of grand larceny. It apears that Howard secured a room at the tailoring establishment of M. Morell, claiming to be a farmer from Carpenteria. This was on Friday night, and on Saturday morning he decamped with goods to the value of $60. Howard was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Pete Storni. The authorities here believe that the thief is an old offender. They are looking up his antecedents,

The celebrated case of John Joseph Quinn against Joseph John Brown, has at lest terminated, the jury rendering a verdict tonight in favor of the plainin the sum of $100. The suit created marked interest in this county, especially at Santa Ynez, where reside both plaintiff and defendant. Quinn sued Brown to recover $15,000 for allenating his wife's affections. Anterior to this case Mrs. Quinn sued for a divorce, in which case the court has not yet rendered a decision. Forty witnesses have been present in Santa Barbara for two weeks in attendance on these cases. The first ballot stood eight to four in favor of the-plaintiff; a second, third and fourth ballots were taken to fix the amount of damages, but no ballot showed more than $900 for the plaintiff. A large barn, the property of Augustus H. Den, was destroyed by fire at La Patera, near the Asphaltum mines, Friday night, between 11 and 12 oclock. The barn was rented by C. A. Smith and contained property to the value of $4000. Mr. Smith had in the barn fitteen head of horses, three wagons, a large quantity of miners tools, eighty tons of hay, and beans and barley. The cause of the fire is unknown; there is no insurance.

there is no serious delay because of

THE MIRANDE LIQUOR CASE. THE MIRANDE LIQUOR CASE.

The appealed case of the City of Pomona against Gratz Mirande of this place, convicted of violating the prohibition liquor ordinance of Pomona, will come up in the Superior Court in Los Angeles in about a fortnight. The case is of much importance to the people here, and to wine-makers and wine-vineyardists throughout California. It will be recalled that Mr. Mirande violated the local prohibition liquor law deliberately and intentionally, because he wanted to make a test case of the principle involved. He is backed by the State Wine-makers' Association, and has all his law bills guaranteed. The association and Mr. Mirande argue that no City Trustees in California have the right to declare how many of how few galions of the product of a vineyard shall be sold, under penalty of a fine and imprisonment, any more than the City Trustees may make a law stating how much butter or hay, or honey or apples a farmer may sell as the products of his field. The present local prohibitory liquor law says that it is a misdemeanor to sell wine in this city in less than two-gallon lots. City Attorney Owen has the case for the city, and Mr. Mirande has Los Angeles attorneys. The appealed case of the City of Poimated that the Loss Will Amount to Fifty Per Cent.—Packing-houses Closing for the Season. Still Much Good Fruit Left.

RIVERSIDE, Jan. 18 .- (Regular Correspondence.) The scene presented in Riverside today is a sad one. The frost Riverside today is a sad one. The frost which came upon the valley on Saturday night, January 4, was known from the start to have done great damage, but it takes several days to reveal the true extent of the damage done, and all manner of estimates have been heard. The Times correspondent has purposely refrained from comment until the damage was fully in evidence. The rain has done its work of loosening the fruit from the trees, and throughout the valley, barring a few scattered orchards, the ground bescattered orchards, the ground neath the trees is growing yellow with the fallen fruit. While the damage is no more severe on certain orchards dent that the damage covers more territory, extending almost entirely over the valley.

a matter of conjecture, but the most favorable estimate that can possibly be made is that the marketable fruit has shrunk one-half.

One of the leading packers had bought heavily of oranges. A good portion of them he succeeded in marketing, but on Thursday he hauled out and dumped by the roadside twelve carloads of fruit for which he had paid $7000.

carloads of fruit for which he had paid $7000.

With all their misfortune the people of Riverside are manifesting wonderful pluck. The calamity which fell upon them never shook their courage. The extent of their misfortune would never be heard from their lips, and yet the interests of the future demand an honest chronicling of the conditions as they exist.

One of the private packing-houses has closed for the season, and about the others there is no longer evidence of a disposition to rush fruit to market. It can be said that the fruit to be shipped after this date will be that which has comparatively or wholly, escaped the frost. That which was badly injured is now in a condition which precludes the possibility of shipment.

SANTA MONICA, Jan. 18.—(Regular Correspondence.) Notwithstanding the rain work on the electric road between Los Angeles and this city is to be prose-cuted continuously. The weather has caused some inconvenience in the work but the men employed on it, many of whom have temporary quarters in this city, have gone out to it as usual. CHICKEN THIEF SENTENCED.

Francisco Higueria, a Mexican formerly employed at Port Los Angeles, was sentenced by Justice Wells to-day to spend twenty-five days in the County Jall. E. Novarine a French man of Santa Monica, saw Higueria prowling about his hen roost and chased him. The pursued man, being hard pressed, dropped a gunny-sack, which he carried. He made his escape, which he carried. He made his escape, but an examination of the contents of the sack, revealed a chicken and a turkey belonging to Novarine and a quantity of shirts and other new furnishing goods, which were identified as having been stolen from the store of P. A. Galgani at Santa Monica Cañon. Novarine swore out a warrant character. Novarine swore out a warrant, charging John Doe with stealing the fowls. MUSIC AND MUSICIANS

Spohr's great oratorio, "The Last Judgment," is to be rendered on Friday evening by the choir of St. Paul's Church, in the Güld Hall. This work has never been given in Los Angeles Hefore, and its rendition will excite a specific of the control of great deal of musical interest. The work is a very great one, and calls for the best musical talent and culture to adequately render the composition.

Winnowing the Candidates by a Civil Service Examination.

The dignified apartment in which the United States courts hold their sittings

The dignified apartment in which the United States courts hold their sittings was turned into a schoolroom Friday, when eleven candidates were examined as to their fitness to occupy positions in the Bureau of Animal Industry—a recently-established branch of the Department of Agriculture.

William T. Bowen, superintendent of mails, and also secretary of the board of civil service examiners, was in charge. One man sought an appointment as meat inspector, five jobs as stock examiners, and five more places as taggers. When the class had assembled, Mr. Bowen broke the seals of the questions which had been sent on from Washington, and the candidates went to work with all their might.

The candidate for meat inspector was alowed four hours in which to write his answers, the others three hours each. The examination papers will be sent to Washington for marking, and then the names of those who have attained the necessary percentage will be placed on the dist from which future appointments shall be made.

AN ORIENTAL DESPOT.

Abdul Hamid, Sultan of Turkey, and

(From "Abdul Hamid, Sultan of Tur-key: A Character Shetch," by W. T. Stead, in the January Revie wof Re-views:) Abdul Hamid is, of all men, one of hose most to be pitied, but at the present moment there is but little great deal of musical interest. The work is a very great one, and calls for the best musical talent and culture to adequately render the composition. The solo parts have been alloted to Madame Martinez, J. H. Zinck and Marion Wigmore. The chorus has had a long and thorough drilling under the direction of J. C. Dunster, who conducts the work.

The oratorio of "The Messiah" will be repeated Tuesday evening at Simpser Tabernacle. Mr. Bacon will sing the tenor solos.

Miss Edna Larkin will give a piano recital Thursday evening at the Blanch-ard-Fitzgerald Hall.

Mrs. Jenny Kempton's pupils will give a recital at her residence, No. 1140 South Pearl street, Wednseday afternoon.

Oscar Schleif will give a piano recital Friday evening, at the Southern California Music Hall. He will be assisted by Fery Rinardy, violinist.

TEMPERANCE WORKERS.

"The Home vs. the Saloon"—W.C. T.U. Notes.

"The anti-saloon workers gathered in force at Temperance Temple yesterday, in answer to a call from the Prohibition County Central Committee for a great mass-meeting to discuss "The Home vs. the Saloon."

Dr. Harwood called the meeting to order at 10 a.m., and introduced the first speaker—John A. B. Wilson, Do. Dr. Wilson talked for an hour and a half. The main purpose of his address was to show that Prohibitionists should confine all their energies to the one great aim of securing the suppression of the saloon, and not monkey withsuch things as the government owners.

The Calvert Baby.

The Calvert Baby.

In order to allay suspicion and set at rest rumors that the child of Mrs. Ike Calvert of Vernon was born dead on account of her nusband's brutality, Coroner Campbell yesterday had the body of the infant exhumed and held an inquest. An autopsy was made by Drs. Campbell and Walter Lindley. Dr. Lindley in detailing the result of the autopsy at the inquest, testified that the body was evidently that of a stillborn infant. It was decided that the husband and father, though inhuman in his treatment of his wife, was not responsible for the death of the infant.
